THE RECORD OF THE CHAMPION CREWS.

The crisis is over! Another long-to be-remembered aquatic contest has been lost and won, and the annals of boat racing upon the western continent have been rendered still more interesting by the addition of another brilliant page—a leaf in the book of fame which will be perused with special pride by the sons of Old England, for upon it is recorded a well earned triumph by their countrymen upon foreign waters, and over the representative oarsmen of a distant land. Yes, the day fraught with so much interest to the boating world has been numbered with the past, and the excitement, which for weeks has swayed rowing circles, as well as other classes of the community, has now subsided, and the important event which gave rise to it is discussed with that calmness induced by a result which cannot now be altered. We refer to the meeting of the champion four-oared crews of England and America—the Tyne crew, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Eng., and the "Paris crew," of St. John, N. B., in a six mile race for the championship of the world and £500 a side, which took place on the St. Lawrence river, at Lachine, Canada, on Thursday, Sept. 15th, victory perching upon the banners of the strong armed four who had journeyed three thousand miles to compete for the laurel wreath so gallantly won. It was a magnificent race, however, and, though the ensign of our champions went down, they made a glorious effort to grasp the honors, and their escutcheon is unblemished by the defeat. We herewith present a full and accurate report of the race from the pen of our representative, prefacing it with a sketch of

THE CREWS AND THEIR PERFORMANCES.

THE TYNE CREW.

The most striking figure in the Tyneside boat is without doubt the stroke, James Renforth, aquatic champion of England. A more powerfully built or vigorous man has rarely been seated in a wager boat, and his antecedents are of the most unusual kind for one of his vocation. He was born in a cottage situate on the Rabbet Banks, Gateshead-on-Tyne, in the year 1842, and he is therefore 28 years of age. His father was a hammerman at one of the Tyneside factories, and was noted for his immense personal strength. As soon as young Renforth had acquired sufficient muscular power to wield the hammer he, too, went into one of the factories as a "striker," and at this business he remained until he was about 16 years old. He was a wild lad, full of animal spirits, and ready for a spree at any time. In one of his outbursts he was so unfortunate as to listen to the blandishments of the recruiting sergeant, and long before he was out of his teens he found himself invested in the red tunic of the British soldier, and had attained the honorable status of a full private. Renforth was sent out for foreign service in the West Indies, and upon the voyage he received some marks of consideration from the sailors of the transport ship, which he will carry with him as souvenirs of the trip for the remainder of his sojourn here below. His arms and chest were elaborately "tattooed" with figures and scroll work, and as the greatest care had been taken to pierce the skin in drawing the designs and to rub the gunpowder thoroughly into the punctures, the effects produced will last as long as the flesh remains upon his bones. Renforth's father purchased his discharge after he had been a few years in the service, and the future champion returned home to a rather unsettled way of life. He joined the Durham militia artillery, and in his numerous spare moments practised swimming upon the Tyne. In this pursuit he soon became a great adept, and, one after another, defeated several of the crack swimmers of the north. To this period of his life belongs a very characteristic anecdote, showing his extraordinary courage and physical endurance. There was a gala to be held upon a piece of water called Talkin Tarn, about fifty miles from Newcastle, and Renforth, who was "out of collar" at the time, was very anxious to compete for the prize offered for swimmers. He had no money to pay the train fare, and, scorning to ask any one for the amount, he determined to walk the fifty miles in order to compete. Starting from Newcastle about eleven o'clock on the night preceding the gala he arrived at Talkin Tarn about twelve o'clock next day, and some hours afterwards he started in the swimming contest, and, striking out like a lion, won easily, but only to find that, by a clause in the conditions, he was disqualified from competing and thus all his labor and pains were thrown away. It is unnecessary to add that some good Samaritan refreshed him and paid his passage home per train. Up to the year 1867 he was entirely unknown to aquatic men, and his introduction to the world as an oarsman may be clearly traced to his procuring an engagement to row the workmen engaged in taking down the old Tyne Bridge to and from their employment in 1866. Applying himself to rowing with his usual energy and determination, he quickly became so proficient that in the early part of 1867 he was matched against R. Curry, of Gateshead, for £5 a side. Renforth beat his man with the most consummate ease, and from that day his career has been one long triumph. In rapid succession he defeated W. Bamborough, Robert Boyd, James Boyd, John Bright, and (at regattas) Joseph Sadler, James Taylor, Robert Chambers, of Wallsend, and others. In 1868 he placed himself under the care of James Taylor, and on the 15th of November, in that year, he beat Harry Kelley in a match from Putney to Mortlake, on the Thames, for £200 and the championship of England. The manner in which he polished off Kelly made it difficult for him to get on any more sculling matches, but he rowed John Bright on the 5th and 6th of October last year, conceding two lengths start, in open boats. The race resulted unfortunately, fouls occurring both days when Renforth tried to pass his man. Finally, the decision was against Renforth, but it is not too much to say that the popular feeling was with him in the affair and that he was voted to be much the better man of the two upon the terms they were meeting at.

James Taylor, who occupies the bow seat in the Tyneside boat, represents the skill, "generalship" and experience of the crew. In the days when the famous Claspers were a power upon the Tyne, they never failed to meet worthy antagonists in the Taylor's crew, and the latter stubbornly persevering, finally succeeded in turning the tables upon the Claspers. James is the youngest of this stout and resolute family of oarsmen, and although he was put into the boat to act as coxswain on both brothers in several of their great contests, yet at first he did not take kindly to an aquatic life, and followed his avocation as a carpenter, to which he served a regular apprenticeship. He was born in April, 1837, and rowed his first match when 19 years of age. His opponent was Thomas Scott, of the Northern Rowing Club, and Taylor defeated him easily. Soon after, he rowed the celebrated Thomas Candlish for a stake of £50, but, owing to an accident, he was defeated, and for several years afterwards took no part in aquatic contests. In 1864 he re-appeared in public, the occasion being Durham regatta, where he was one of the successful four in the Patron's Plate, and (with Wm. Maddin) was defeated by Newby and Marshall in the race for the Silver-bar Plate, pairs. Since that time he has been in incessant training for regattas or matches, and with combined ability and good fortune has had a most successful career. His principal matches have been as follows:—Beat Thos. Matlin for stake of £50, Oct. 16, 1865; beat Geo. Wakefield for stake of £60, Nov. 21, 1865; beat Thomas Winship for stake of £100, April 2, 1866; beat James Percy for stake of £100, Sept. 10, 1866; beat J. H. Clasper for stake of £50, Oct. 20, 1866; beat J. H. Clasper for stake of £30, Oct. 31, 1866; beat John Bright for stake of £100, Dec. 15, 1866; beaten by James Percy in match for £100, May 4, 1867; beat Joseph Heath, on the Thames, upon a foul, for stake of £100, June 8, 1867; beat Mark Addy, of Manchester, on a foul for stake of £100, Oct. 19, 1868; beat James Percy, April, 1870, for stake of £50; beat Mark Addy, May, 1870, on a foul, for stake of £100.

Thomas Winship, of Derwenthaugh, who sits in the "middship-bow place," is twenty-seven years of age, and is brother of the famous rower, Edwin Winship, who was for several years a leading member of the Riswick four and pair. Thomas is by business a waterman and has rowed six races, winning four. He first came out against a youth named Maguire, about ten years ago, and beat him very easily in a match for £5 a side. He was then matched against Gillender for a stake of £40, but was beaten for want of condition. The pair were matched again almost immediately afterwards, and this time Winship disposed of his man with the greatest ease. Tom was then matched against John Simm, a clever sculler, but the task was a very easy one for him, and he beat John without the semblance of a race. The Derwenthaugh oarsman was now looked upon as one of the most promising aspirants of the Tyne, and James Taylor was selected for an antagonist in his next public essay. This time Thomas caught a Tartar, for Taylor with his fine turn of speed got quickly away from him and he was decisively beaten. From the period of this match until after he had joined the champion crew Winship did not row any more matches, but in May last he met Ralph Hepplewhite in a match from the High Level Bridge to the Scotswood Suspension Bridge, for £100, and beat him almost out of sight.

The remaining member of the crew demanding notice is John Martin, of Pelaw Main, the "midship stroke" of the boat. Martin is 27 years of age, and by occupation a "trimmer" of coals. The business is a most laborious one, and Martin is a very powerful man. Previously to joining the champion four his career had been short and obscure, but he has proven a "useful member" of the companionship which at present includes him. Martin was stroke oar of the Pelaw Main Trimmers' Crew, and in his only essay as a sculler of which we have cognizance—an open boat race with Carr, of Deni's Hole—he suffered defeat.

With regard to the antecedents of the champion crew a few words may be said. The four can trace their descent in unbroken line from the ancient monarchs of the north led so often to victory by the celebrated Harry Clasper, lately deceased. The late Robert Chambers, the most popular oarsman England ever produced, was brought out by "old Harry," and for years was a member of the veteran's crew. In 1867, when for some time four-oared rowing had fallen into disfavor on the Tyne, Robert Chambers formed a crew, of which he himself was stroke, James Taylor bow oar, and Matt. Scott and Andy Thompson occupied the midship seats. This four beat a crew stroked by Tom Matlin in a trial match for the honor of representing the Tyne at the international regatta on the Seine (and for a stake of £50) on June 24th, 1867, and proceeding to Paris shortly afterwards, won the great International Prize on the Seine, beating, besides Matlin's crew, which Geo. Hammerton and W. Biden were the respective stroke oars. During the remainder of the year they did good business at regattas, but Robert Chambers dying early in the ensuing summer, a change in their constitution was made. Young Robert Chambers, of Wallsend, a namesake of the mighty champion, was put in his place, and the crew went up to the Grand National Regatta on the Thames in 1868, and swept the board of the champion prizes for pairs and fours, while James Renforth also brought the scullers' prize to the Tyne. Soon afterwards a split took place in the crew. First, Renforth was put into the stroke seat, vice young Robert Chambers deposed; then a misunderstanding took place with the two midshipmen, Scott and Thompson, and they were replaced by Thomas Winship and John Martin. Thus the crew took its present shape, and so constituted it went up to the National Regatta on the Thames in 1869, but was most unfortunate. The Tyne men were beaten by a Surbiton crew in their trial heat, but were laboring under such disadvantages of position and steerage that their friends were positive in declaring them the best four engaged in the race. From this unsatisfactory trial arose the great competition of November last, when the Tyne champion crew was pitted against the champion crew of the Thames in two home and home matches upon the respective rivers, the stakes at issue being £500. The Tyne crew was precisely the same as that which has now crossed the Atlantic, and the Londoners were:—Joseph H. Sadler, bow; Henry Kelley, William Messenger and George Hammerton. They rowed with coxswains, and in the second match—that on the Tyne—Kelly and Hammerton exchanged seats. The Tyne crew won both matches with plenty in hand, and until a crew from this side of the sea has thrown down the gauntlet, none have since been found willing to meet them. The men of the Tyne crew are of very even height, Renforth, Taylor and Winship being each 5 feet, 7½inches, while Martin is 5 feet 9½inches. Both Renforth and Taylor have lately gone into business as innkeepers, the former being host of the Sir Charles Napier, Queen street, Newcastle, and the latter of the Trafalgar Inn, New Bridge street, Newcastle.

THE PARIS CREW.

Robert Fulton, the stroke of the New Brunswick men, first claims our attention. He is a stalwart, wiry, powerful man, reaching an altitude of over six feet, raw-boned and determined in appearance, swarthy in complection, deep-chested, with small eyes, rather regular features and high forehead—such a man as any one would place confidence in if engaged in any description of sport requiring the possession of muscle and endurance. He has been the mainstay of the crew as now formed, and the people of St. John and vicinity who take an interest in boating think that, as a stroke oarsman, there is no one who can compare with "Long Bob," as he is familiarly called. He was born in the neighborhood of St. John twenty-five years ago, and "gathers in" the "little fishes" as a means of procuring his daily bread.

Elijah Ross, who occupies the "mid-ship-aft" seat, is a dark complexioned, sinewy, well built man, the muscles of the arms and shoulders being particularly well developed, and giving evidence of the strength possessed by their handsome owner. In stature he is two inches less than Fulton, is of a buoyant spirit and cheerful disposition, and generally quite talkative, in which respect he does not resemble the balance of the crew (save Hutton), who are rather retiring and not at all demonstrative. He is likewise a native of St. John, is twenty-five years of age, and was the last permanent addition to the Harding champion crew. He formerly devoted his attention to fishing, but for some time past has been a light-house keeper. He pulls a very strong oar, and has contributed as much as any one else to the success of the crew.

Samuel Hutton, the "midship bow," is possessed of features cast in the Milesian mould, set off by a natty moustache, upon the cultivation of which he evidently bestows considerable pains, and looks at all times as though ready to give and take a hard pull upon the element which is his home, crack a joke, dance a jig, or "chaff" with an opponent. Carleton claims him for her own, having first seen daylight there, twenty-five years ago. His height is five feet, ten inches, and in complexion he is likewise dark, of a nervous temperament, while his muscular power is less than that of his fellow oarsmen. He is a man in every way to be depended upon, however, and in all their races has proven a valuable man in the boat.

George Price, who pulls the bow oar, presents in appearance a striking contrast to the other members of the crew, his complexion being fair, while in temperament he is phlegmatic, his features wearing a grave, thoughtful expression continually, and his compressed lips convincing the observer that he would follow with the utmost determination anything which he undertook, and would not "give up the ship" while there was sufficient timber left to make a toothpick. He likewise drew his first breath in the suburbs of St. John, and is at present thirty-three years of age, it being a strange coincidence that both he and Taylor are five years the seniors of their respective stroke-oars. Like Fulton and Hutton he is an "enticer" of the finny tribe in summer, and, during cold season, devotes his time to ship carpentering. His morose disposition has gained for him the appellation of "Sulky George."

Though styled the "St. John's crew" they are not residents of the city of that name proper, but hail from a village, or suburb, called Carleton, located opposite the city and connected therewith by a suspension bridge spanning the lagoon which forms the harbor. The greater portion of its inhabitants obtain a livelihood by following the occupation of fishermen, and from childhood are accustomed to boating, by far the greater portion of their lives being passed upon the water. Under these circumstances it is but natural that rowing, in the science of which they are afforded every opportunity to become proficient, should constitute their favorite recreation. Of this class are the quartet of stalwart heroes who so gallantly represented the New World in the present races, and their suburb of St. John is called Indiantown, the denizens of which are for the most part lumbermen, the laborious character of which avocation is eminently calculated to develop to their fullest extent all the muscles of the body, and render the sinews steel-like in their strength. They are generally men of great stature, powerful frames and massive limbs—splendid specimens of athletes and capable of enduring, for a long time, the severest strain upon the muscular powers. A life of this character imbues them with a love for such athletic sports as require physical ability and endurance to command success, and as there is no pastime more attractive than boating, for indulgence in which they have excellent facilities, to this particular branch of sport they are ardently devoted. For many years a strong spirit of rivalry has existed between the fishermen and hewers of wood, scarcely a season passing without several important races taking place between their respective champions, the honors in which have so far been nearly equally divided. These frequently recurring aquatic meetings have made St. John one of the great boating centres of this continent, and accredited her with the possession of the champion four-oared crew of America—the States as well as the New Dominion. Though having taken part in numerous minor races previously, none of the members of the present champion four became known to aquatic circles at large until the 2d of September, 1865, when a regatta took place in the harbor. For the four-oared lapstreak race four boats were entered, viz.:—James A. Harding, Thetis, Geo. B. McClellan and Amphitrite; the McClellan belonging to Boston. Fulton and Hutton pulled No. 2 and stroke respectively in the Harding, Robert McLaren being No. 3 and Samuel Brittain bow, while Price occupied No. 2 in the Amphitrite. After a very warmly contested race, in which the Thetis, hailing from Indiantown, and the Harding passed and repassed each other, the race being narrowed down to them, the lumbermen arrived at the goal first, only six seconds ahead, the distance, about 4¼ miles by the course rowed, being made in 29:51. A few days afterwards the Harding crew—Ross having taken the place of McLaren and the latter pulling bow oar instead of Britain, while Fulton and Hutton changed positions—issued a challenge to the Thetis four for another race, distance six miles, for $200 a side. This the victors in the preceding contest returned a speedy and favorable reply, a match being arranged without delay and the race coming off on September 22d on the Kennebeccasis. The result was a second victory for the men of Indiantown, who were five seconds to the good at the finish, the time for the six miles being 39:30. In 1866, the Carleton men re-challenged their successful rivals, and a fresh agreement was entered into to row six miles for $500 a side. The race came off on Sept. 10th, and the Harding crew, which had been again changed by substituting Price for Ross, carried the day by about 35 seconds. The time for the six miles was 38:50, being the fastest upon record, and that too, with a lap-streak outrigger, 36 ft. long, 32 in. wide, 12 in. deep, and weighing in the neighborhood of 160 lbs.

This achievement, which constituted the Harding four champions of St. John—which title they have ever since retained—brought them into prominence, and stamped them as indisputably fine oarsmen, who bade fair to prove more than a match for any four upon the American continent. Price pulled in the Thetis and Fulton in the Geo. C. Wiggin, at Boston, July 4th, same year, the former boat winning. Shortly subsequent to their great victory at St. John they proceeded to Springfield, Mass., and took part in the annual regatta there, held on Sept. 20th, winning with ease and vanquishing four competitors, viz.:—Frank Queen, of New York, Lea Shrew; Gotham, York, Biglin crew; Union, of Worcester, and Volunteer, of Boston. Time for the three miles, 21:08½, though they could have cut it down much lower if necessary, as they were 35½ seconds ahead. It having been announced that a regatta for amateurs and professionals, open to oarsmen from all countries, was to take place on the river Seine, at Paris, during the Exposition Universelle held in 1867, the people of St. John, ever noted for their love of aquatic pastimes, and who were enthusiastic in their admiration for their champions, resolved that they should represent the western continent in France. Accordingly early in June of said year they took their departure from New York, arriving at their destination in due course. They took with them two boats—the James A. Harding, inrigged, and an outrigger built expressly for the occasion of St. John, the latter being about 200lbs. in weight, while the other weighed 170lbs. The crew were the same as now, and the races upon the Seine were the first in which they had ever pulled together. The opening race in which they participated in the "French Regatta" was for inrigged boats, distance four miles, with turns, and took place on July 7th. They had opposed to them five crack amateur crews from France and one from England, but after a good race with the Geslings, of Paris, the St. John's men were triumphant, though prior to the start they had not been taken into account by betting men, who did not think they had the remotest chance to win. The second event took place on July 8th, and was for outriggers, over a straight course, one mile and a half in length, and besides the New Brunswick four, crews were entered from the London Rowing Club —amateur champions of the Thames—Oxford University, Germany and France, seven in all. The Americans had plenty of backers for this race, their splendid performance in a heavy boat the day previous having created a most favorable impression, and the result showed that they were fully deserving of these good opinions, for, though interfered with slightly, and one of the men slipping from his seat, they went away from their opponents at a clipping pace, cutting out the work from the start, and ultimately won by several lengths easily. They were likewise booked for competition in the "British Regatta," which followed the French, and which was marked by several contests between the leading professionals of England, but in consequence of those having the management of the same having arranged matters different from what they had been led to expect, the St. John men declined to enter, they being supported in such declension by Montenuis' crew. It has always been a matter of regret that they did not have an opportunity of measuring strength and skill with the celebrated British professionals while there, but they were perfectly justified in pursuing the course they did. After disposing of their boats for a mere song the victorious men of Brunswick returned home. Upon their arrival at St. John they received a perfect ovation, and for days and weeks were the lions of the city.

A few weeks later they came very near being forced to take a back seat in a race with a crew from Indiantown, though the latter had been disabled by a foul, but during the following year they gave this same four such a beating as they never had before, firmly establishing their reputation as far superior to anything that could be "scared up" in the Provinces. About the time of the departure of the St. Johns for Paris, the Ward brothers—consisting of Charley, Hank and Al Gil and Josh—who became champion of America by defeating the "New York," formerly the "Collyer," crew, composed of John and Barney Biglin, John Biew and J. J. Eckerson, at Sing Sing, Sept. 25, 1865), unaware of their intention, issued a challenge to them to row six miles for the championship. This was accepted by another four from St. John, called the Morris crew, though by some to be equal to the Paris four, and the race took place on the Connecticut river at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 11th, 1867, when the heroes of the Hudson Highlands won with ridiculous ease in 39:28. Sometime subsequent the Wards, who were in high feather over this most signal victory, issued a challenge through our columns to row any four-oared crew in the world a six mile race for as much as $10,000. This was not responded to until the following summer, when Asst. C. S. Elliott, the boat builder of Greenpoint, called at our office, in company with one of the backers of the Paris crew, and a card of acceptance appeared in the following week's issue of the Clipper, over the signature of Mr. Elliott, who appointed a time to meet and arrange a match. At the time fixed for the meeting a large number of boating men congregated in our sanctum, evincing the interest felt in the proceedings. After a prolonged discussion over the distance to be pulled and the amount rowed for, the New Yorkers and desiring to lessen each, a compromise was effected and articles drawn up, stipulating to row a six mile race at Springfield, Mass., for $3,000—$1,500 a side. The race took place on the 21st of October, '68, and, though the New Yorkers were the favorites, being rowed in their own boats—the Elliott, built expressly for the occasion, and one minute ahead in 39:24½, according to the report of the judges, which was three-quarters of a second slower than the time of the Wards when they defeated the Morris crew by equally as great a distance. According to the report of several persons who privately timed the race, however, it was not pulled within a minute of that time; however, these statements go for nothing, as the official timer is supposed to be responsible, and his report is the one that is placed upon the record. This triumph was considered of far greater import than the double victory obtained on the Seine, and upon the return of the champions to St. John the citizens turned out en masse to meet them. They were allowed the freedom of the city and were lionized and feted everywhere, while the municipal authorities evinced their appreciation of their merit by giving to each man a lot of ground, together with $1,000 in cash.

They did not engage in any more races until the summer of 1869, when, by invitation of the Lachine Boating Club, they attended the regatta held upon the St. Lawrence, under the auspices of said organization, on July 24th, winning the four-oared outrigger race, four miles, easily, in 29:47. Their next appearance was in Toronto, C. W., upon the occasion of the annual regatta of the Toronto Rowing Club, Aug. 7th, same year, winning the outrigger race, four miles, in 26:30. On the 14th of the same month they entered for the four-oared race, four miles, at the Niagara regatta and were again victorious, the time being 25:30. This was the last contest in which they engaged until the one under consideration, having shortly after their return to St. John publicly announced that they had resolved to retire after the close of 1869, and all challenges sent to them after Dec. 31st would not receive attention, but that they would negotiate for a match with any four breathing prior to that time. They had, including local races not here enumerated, achieved nineteen successive victories without a single defeat, and being jealous of the fame so suddenly gained by the crew stroked by England's champion, concluded to reconsider their resolution and have one more trial previous to permanent retirement, singling out for their antagonists in this attempt to reach the topmost round of the ladder of aquatic fame the champion four of the old world. This brought about

THE PRESENT MATCH.

Shortly subsequent to the double victory achieved by the Tyne four in the championship races with the Thames crew—composed of Harry Kelley, Joe Sadler, Wm. Messenger and George Hammerton—in the fall of last year, allusions were made in the English sporting press to a proposed match with the Paris crew for the championship of the world, as it had been satisfactorily demonstrated that there were then no other four oarsmen in all England who could compete with the Tynesiders successfully. No formal challenge was offered, however, but upon the return of Walter Brown to this country he announced through the press that he was authorized to issue a challenge on behalf of the Tyne crew to the St. John's men, to row a four and a half miles straightaway race, with or without coxswains, on the Hudson river, for £500 a side, £300 to be allowed for expenses. To this no reply was made by he New Brunswickers, either because they were unaware of its publication or because they did not believe Brown had any authority to make such a match—perhaps in consequence of the antagonistic feeling existing between him and said crew, which would prevent their negotiating with him at all. However, the agitation of the subject was productive of gratifying results, for early in the month of February the Vice President of the Lachine Boating Club, of Lachine, Canada, having obtained the consent of the St. John oarsmen, sent a challenge to the Tyne crew, proposing a race for the sum above mentioned, six miles, on Canadian waters, £300 being offered for expenses. To this an answer by telegraph was received on Feb. 23d, accepting the terms offered conditionally. Articles of agreement were then drawn up and signed by the St. John's crew and forwarded to Newcastle, the following being a copy of the agreement:—

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT between James Renforth and three others, forming the "Tyne Crew," of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Eng., and Robert Fulton and three others, forming the "Paris Crew," of St. John, N. B., for a four-oared boat race at Lachine, near Montreal, Canada, in Sept., 1870.

It is mutually covenanted and agreed between the two crews of Lachine Boating Club, Montreal, as follows:—

1. That they shall row a four-oared race in the best boats each can get, on the St. Lawrence river, at Lachine, near Montreal, Canada, on the first day of Sept., 1870, the distance to be six miles (three up the river from Lachine and back again), for the sum of £300 and the championship. The St. John Paris Crew to row without a coxswain, and the Tyne Crew to have the right of rowing with or without one, as they may see fit.

2. The boats to start from points, buoys or line, such point, buoys or distances on line to be not less than 30 yards apart, and to row a distance of three miles up river, where there shall be two stake-boats, and turn each boat its own stake-boat, being the one on its own side of starting, the turn to be made from left to right and back to the line of starting, such turning stake-boats to be 150 yards apart.

3. The race to be rowed as above stated, on the 1st day of Sept., 1870, at the hour of 3 o'clock P. M., if the water is smooth, the umpires to be the judges of the fitness of the water. If the state of the water is, in the opinion of the umpires, unfit for rowing a satisfactory race, the umpires shall be empowered to postpone the race from day to day until the state of the river is favorable.

4. One-half of the stakes to be deposited by each party in the hands of Mr. Henry Hogan, proprietor of the St. Lawrence Hall, Montreal, or at the Bank of Montreal, on the signing of these articles, and the remaining half to be so deposited not later than the 1st day of August, 1870. Either party failing to make such latter deposit within ten days of the specified time to forfeit the amount previously deposited.

5. The Tyne crew hereby nominate ——— and the Paris crew nominate ——— as their respective umpires for the race in question. A referee to be decided upon the day before the race by the respective crews; failing to agree upon a referee, the president of the Lachine Boating Club, Montreal, is hereby vested with the right of appointing said referee.

6. In consideration of the race herein provided for being rowed under the auspices of the Lachine Boating Club, the same club hereby promises and agrees to pay to the stakeholder, immediately after the final deposit by the Tyne crew is made, the sum of two hundred pounds sterling, on account of the expenses incurred by that crew by reason of their rowing at Lachine as aforesaid; the said sum to be paid to the Tyne crew on their arrival at Lachine.

7. The rules of rowing and other details of the race to be left in the hands of the Lachine Boating Club, who hereby undertake to arrange and carry out the same with perfect impartiality, and as efficiently as possible.

8. The referee, when appointed, will be fully empowered to settle all and every matter of dispute which may arise.

9. The two crews hereby bind themselves that whatever may be their present or future interests, neither crew will, prior to the first of September, 1870, consent to row a race during their absence from home in any point in the States or Canada (Lachine excepted), unless with the knowledge and approval of the Lachine Boating Club.

These articles were received about the middle of April, but were objectionable to the Englishmen in the matter of date of rowing, manner of turning the stake-boats and duties of the referee; consequently they were returned unsigned, accompanied by a note stating their objections and wishes. Fresh articles were then drawn up, the date being altered to Sept. 15th; the referee empowered, in case of disagreement between the umpires as to the state of the weather, to postpone the race until the first favorable day thereafter; the manager of the Ontario Bank, Montreal, made final stakeholder and the date of the second deposit fixed as Sept. 1st; a clause was likewise added, whereby the Lachine Club agreed to have the stake-boats moored, and the course staked out, fourteen days before the race. These were forwarded to Renforth during the latter part of May, when they were duly signed and returned, accompanied by the subjoined letter:—

SIR CHARLES NAPIER INN, Queen street,
NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, June 15, 1870.

DEAR SIR.—I received yours, with three copies of articles for the match between the Tyne and St. John's crews, in due course, and I have now to reply, notifying that I have signed the copies without alteration. As requested, I forwarded the news of their signature to Mr. Fulton, of the St. John's crew, by Atlantic cable, so that before this note can reach you by mail you will be in possession of the information. I enclose you the complete copies of articles, with the first instalment of the stakes on the part of the Tyne crew (£250), and trust that nothing will intervene to prevent the interesting match between the Newcastle four and the celebrated oarsmen of New Brunswick. All that we desire is a fair course and a reasonable provision against the risk of accidents during the race. In leaving the arrangements touching these matters in the hands of your club, we have the greatest confidence that you will leave nothing undone to secure fair rowing water for both crews; that you will see to the course being plainly marked out, and that you will take good care of the stakes as will prevent the passage of steamers by it during the time the race is being rowed. We are much obliged for your kind offer to procure us lodgings during our stay, and have no hesitation in troubling you in the way you mention. We have not settled yet the exact time of our departure from England, but it will be probably about the middle of August, and we shall want the use of a house at Lachine for a month. The services of an English cook will also, I suppose, be necessary, and you might engage us one for the same period. In a match like the present—which places us in the position of representative oarsmen of the old country—you will easily understand that we desire to take every care that none of those unfortunate mistakes happen which have before to-day prevented men, under similar circumstances, from doing full justice to themselves; and we will, therefore, be very glad to receive any suggestions you may have to make as to our arrangements when fairly landed in Canada. On behalf of the Tyne crew, I have to tender our thanks for the care you have taken in the conduct of these negotiations for this match. I assure you that we fully appreciate the patience and care you have shown in considering and explaining the small but troublesome differences which stood between the crews, and the confidence inspired amongst our supporters by your letters have gone a long way to remove the prejudices which will always exist against sending men and money so far away from home. Trusting to hear from you soon with reference to the arrangements at Lachine, I remain, yours truly,

JAMES RENFORTH, Champion Sculler of England.

THE CREWS IN TRAINING.

The Tyne men, like their opponents, concluded to dispense with the services of a coxswain, and in March gave orders to it. Jewitt, of Dunstan, "King," to build them a boat after the style in vogue upon the side the Atlantic. Early in April they commenced preparatory exercise, in anticipation of the match progressing, beginning thus early not only with a view to securing physical perfection, but that they might place themselves as near as possible upon an equality with their opponents in the, to them, novel style of rowing without a coxswain. To this end they used their old ship Tyne, minus a rudder, until the new boat was finished, the trial being very satisfactory. After the clinching of the argument they took up their quarters at Robt. Gibson's, Scotswood, where real work was begun, and here they remained up to the day of their departure for Glasgow, Scotland, in June, leaving the latter place on the following day for Quebec in the Allan steamer Hibernian, accompanied by John Adams, the ten steamer Hibernian, accompanied by John Adams, the ten steamer, and John Wilkinson, who has charge of extra oars, &c., and who will look after the baggage and the business arrangements. They were met upon arrival by Messrs. S. H. Wallis, J. H. McKenzie, H. J. Lindsay, and James Harvey, members of the Lachine Club, who extended a cordial welcome and conducted them to quarters previously secured.

They brought with them two four-oared boats—the Jarrow-on-Tyne and Dunstan-on-Tyne—built respectively by Armstrong and Jewitt, and two scull boats belonging to Renforth, in anticipation of a match with Coulter, to be rowed in—accepted the latter's challenge prior to leaving England. They arrived on Aug. 21st, and remained at Quebec until the evening of the following day, when they left for Montreal, arriving there on the morning of the 23d, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day of leaving had been provided for their accommodation at a neat little cottage facing the depot. They baptized the Dunstan-on-

COLES, Capt. Cowper—Of the British navy, and a son of the Rev. John Coles, of Dittesen Park, Hants, Eng. In 1859 he offered the navy, serving with signal ability on various stations. At the outbreak of the war with Russia he was sent to the Crimea, and in the assault on Sebastopol in October, 1854, greatly distinguished himself by the skilful manner in which he handled his ship, the Agamemnon. For his services on this occasion he was highly praised by Admiral Sir E. Lyons. Subsequently, at Kerech and in the operations in the Sea of Azoff, Capt. Coles was mainly instrumental in 1855 in devising a plan for the construction of shot-proof rafts, which was submitted to a board of officers, who reported favorably upon it, and the captain was ordered to England to superintend the carrying out of the contemplated work, however, soon ceasing, his plans were never completed. In November, 1855, he conceived the idea of protecting guns by shields, and four years later, on the suggestion of Sir J. Brown, he fitted a shield and gun upon a turn-table. This was the origin of the turret system, which was first used in the Royal Sovereign iron-clad, and has since been adopted in all the other vessels of the British navy. This invention gave Captain Coles a reputation in all the naval powers of the world—but with the British ironclad Captain, which went down in a gale off Cape Finisterre, in Galicia, on the night of Sept. 8th, aged 61.

CARRERE, Joseph—A deceased vocalist well known in this city as connected with the Gold Beard. He was also a member of the Undine Boat Club—found drowned in about 18 inches of water in Rahway, N. J., on Sept. 14th, aged 23.

DAILLY, Pierre Louis Charles—General in the French army and educated at the military school of St. Cyr. In 1836 he entered the infantry, and two years later became sub-lieutenant. He was appointed to be captain in 1837, and advanced by successive promotions to the grade of colonel of the 20th Regiment in 1851. He was appointed brigadier general in 1854, served in the Crimean campaign, and was conspicuous in the battles of the Alma, the Mamelon, Vert and Traktir. He was appointed general of division Sept. 22, 1855. On his return from the Crimea he was nominated to be aide-de-camp to the Emperor, and next commanded in the Italian war a division of the last brigade of which distinguished itself by its almost at Magenta, and particularly at Solferino, where two colonels and four chefs de bataillon were killed under his eyes. Gen. Failly has more recently occupied public attention as the commander of the expeditionary corps sent to Rome in 1867 to defend the Papal States against the Garibaldian people. It was under his orders that French troops acted at Mentana, where he reported that the chassepot rifle was decisive. He was appointed senator, March 12, 1868, and in October, 1869, received command of the Third Army Corps at Nancy, succeeding Marshal Bazaine. In the war now pending between the French and Prussians he was in command of the Fifth Army Corps, but failed to get up in time to re-enforce Marshal MacMahon, which seriously affected the result of the battle of Wörth. He was on that account placed under arrest by MacMahon, and went on to Chalons to await the arrival of his successor. It appeared, however, that he accompanied MacMahon in his march to the northern frontier, and was either shot by his orders or by his own troops—aged 62.

THE RING.

THE RECENT LIGHT-WEIGHT MATCH.

EDWARDS RECEIVES THE STAKES—CARD FROM COLLYER.

Having been properly indemnified, we last week handed over to Billy Edwards the $1,100 to which he became entitled through the failure of Collyer to post his final deposit on time. On Friday, 16th, Collyer arrived in town from the west, and as soon as possible called at Edwards' place and left word for him to attend at the CLIPPER office on the day following, in order that the difficulty between them might be finally settled. Sam was on hand at the appointed time, but Edwards declined to meet him anywhere else except at his (Edwards') saloon, which of course did'nt suit Collyer. The latter feels deeply aggrieved and indignant at the action taken by Edwards, and in the card which appears below declares his determination not to let the matter drop, defining his reasons for so doing. Read his card:

BROOKSTOWN, Ia. D., Sept. 12th, 1870.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR.—Receiving a despatch from this city that Edwards had received forfeit, and to come on immediately, I at once left training at St. Louis and journeyed to New York, arriving here last night. Had Edwards claimed forfeit at the proper time, I could have found no fault, but knowing that I was liable to forfeit, I telegraphed for a decision, having a sufficient amount ready to refund the forfeit and let the match proceed, should Edwards exact it. A despatch was returned to the effect that it was all right, and Edwards would not take any advantage. I at once commenced thorough training, despatched for my trainers, etc. My friend Courtney, of this city, acting under my instructions, met Edwards a couple of days after, who told him that he had stopped work and claimed the money. Courtney, at Harry Hill's, before Joe Coburn, Johnny Dwyer, Johnny Aaron and others, offered to allow Edwards to draw the money, providing he would agree to proceed with the match, he (Courtney) replacing the amount forfeited. Thus the match would stand, me fighting for one hundred and he contending for fifteen hundred dollars, besides the exertion money, but he refused. If Ned was not inducement enough, besides this the championship, I don't know what else he wants; but, knowing him to be a coward at heart, I have come to the conclusion that he is afraid to fight, which he has in this instance proven without doubt, and I fear I will never get a chance to meet him on equal terms. The challenge be accepted I issued last March and he knew that I was on my way to California and half way there, when he accepted it. I at once returned and for shame sake he was compelled to go on with the match, but I had to concede everything to him, and he made it to suit himself. I was only too glad to get my own weight; that I guess scared him out of this match, as I know he never meant to meet me if he could possibly avoid it. The only excuse they make is that I did the same thing myself to Doherty. Had I been in my place he (Edwards) would have taken it that day; but I disdain to take advantage of any man, and I refused to fight that morning knowing that Doherty could not fight. When we got off the scales he called me into his state room and showed me his conditional acceptance, and one that he could not last fifteen minutes in the ring. He asked me to come to Richmond next day and he would make a new match for a large stake, providing I would give him time to get well. I went there, but he declined to make a match. My friends subscribed a purse of five hundred dollars to fight him at once, they not being aware of his condition. I flatly refused, taking all the blame on myself in order to save him all I could. I deny anybody to show me one single man that ever had an inclination to give me a turn that I did not satisfy, from Dooney Harris down to himself. Further, I again state that I will renew the match at any time, and came here for that purpose; but Edwards would not meet me, after being notified, which shows at once that he won't fight. The knowledge of this, and the way he has fooled me, induces me to sue for my own, which will be no worse than he did at our first battle. He prevailed on me to furnish the ring, which I did, never asking to be paid for it. I trusted to his honor, if he won, to pay me, and if I won I did not intend to ask for it. I met him and Dooney in Washington a few weeks after, and they promised if I would give them time to get to New York, they would send it to me, sure. From them of, but never heard from them. I next met Dooney at East New York, two days before our last fight. Through fear he promised that the ring would be furnished by himself and Edwards, which would square us. On stripping that morning they made me pay twenty-five dollars or fight in the crowd. I had to pay, which looked like downright robbery to me, but I could not help myself, as I saw they were traveling and I was not. I left them in all the wages ready for both Edwards and Dooney Harris, providing they mean business. The biggest proof that Edwards won't fight, is that he claims forfeit, but he don't claim the championship, which I have held so long. Respectfully yours, SAM COLLYER,

Light Weight Champion.

P. S.—On the evening of the 17th Collyer left for Baltimore, and on the 19th we received another communication from him, from there, in which he says that he will post $1,500 to Edwards' $500, providing the latter will fight within four weeks from date, 18th inst. He says he'll fight Billy as close to New York as the latter please, or any where else in the United States, and includes Dooney Harris in the challenge.

CHALLENGE TO NOVICES.—Bill Clark, of the Arbour, 50 West Houston street, informs us that he has a novice whom he will match against any other novice in America for $500 a side, and any one fancying the job can get on by calling upon him as above. The dash is 9 weighing 200 pounds, reaches an altitude of 6 feet 1 inch without his patent leathers, and is a new arrival "upon the shores of Amerikay." By the way, sport, now that the weather has become cooler, is plentiful at the Arbour, and on Saturday night, 17th inst., the fistical debating society were present in force and enjoyed themselves hugely. The chief feature was a slashing bout between the Novice above mentioned and the irrepressible "Hoboken Clipper," in which the latter got "rat o." There was likewise fine sparring by others in the commodious and well-arranged hall devoted to the milling god.

THE CHAMPION AT HOME.—James Mace has concluded to settle permanently in the metropolis, and, in conjunction with Phil. Hargreaves, has obtained a five years' lease of the premises No. 69 West Twenty-third street, immediately opposite Booth's Theatre, which is now being fitted up in elegant style preparatory to the opening, which will take place on Saturday, Oct. 1st. In addition to the bar, which will be of beautiful design, there will be luncheon rooms and a suit of private apartments handsomely furnished—in short, the commodious establishment will be provided with everything requisite to ensure the comfort and convenience of its patrons. The location is excellent, and there is every prospect that the proprietors will prosper. See their advertisement in another column.

DEATH OF MIKE MCDERMOTT.—A letter from Wm. Riggs, formerly of this city, but now residing at Omaha, Neb., informs us of the death of Mike McDermott, which occurred in that city during the latter part of the month of August. Many of our New York readers will recollect the deceased, who was brought up in this city, but for a number of years has made his home in the far west. At the time of his death he was part proprietor of a prosperous wholesale liquor establishment at Omaha, and had excellent prospects, which were thus sorrowfully blasted. He leaves a wife and child.

TOM KELLY, of St. Louis, writes to us, saying that James Gallagher, who recently fought Meekin, can be backed against any novice in America, big or little, particularly Jack Madden, Tom Allen's man, for not less than $500 a side, to mill within fifty miles of St. Louis, reasonable expenses to be allowed to any one going from a distance. The match can be made through this office, or by calling upon Kelly in person.

AN OLD SPORT GONE.—John C. Perry, more generally known by the sobriquet of "Oyster Jack," died very suddenly on the 15th inst., at his residence, the New York House, West Philadelphia. For many years he was a prominent character in the sporting world, seldom missing any event of importance, and his death will be heard of with true sorrow by those who knew him in life.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Jacoby, the celebrated rifle artist, Col. J. H. Monstery, professor of the sword exercise, etc., and Prof. J. E. Taylor, formerly of Boston, lately arrived in the metropolis and make their headquarters at Prof. Clark's, 50 West Houston street. The Colonel has recovered from the affection of the eyes which troubled him in California, and purposes opening a fencing academy in this city shortly.

TOM ALLEN AND JAMES C. GALLAGHER were to meet at Hennessey's, St. Louis, on the night of the 17th inst. for the purpose of arranging a match upon terms offered by Allen and accepted by Gallagher, viz.:—Tom to stake $1,000 to the other's $500.

DEATH OF A SPORTING MAN.—We regret to announce the sudden death of Richard Newton, a prominent sporting man of the City of Churches, on the night of the 14th inst.

CHARLEY COLLINS, the "Cast Iron Man," and Jack Madden fought in a room at St. Louis last week, the former, who had no chance, giving up at the end of ten minutes and three rounds.

WE HAVE LETTERS for Patsy Sheppard (2), and Wm. McCann.

AQUATIC.

THE PITTSBURGH REGATTA.—The undecided race of the regatta held on the lower Monongahela course on the 3d inst. was rowed over on the 10th, only two crews competing, viz.:—the McKee and Chambers club fours. Coulter's crew was ruled out because the stroke oar had been changed, which was in direct violation of the rules governing the race, and it became a walk over for the McKees. Just here we would advise that those interested prominently in rowing matters in Pittsburgh have a full three mile course measured off, so the time given for races held there of late is ridiculous and shows conclusively that it is very much short of the mark. Concerning the outrageous piece of business which took place there upon the occasion of the regatta, the originators of the trouble have published the following card, with a view to excusing their conduct:—

About the regatta on the 3d we want to explain. We admit, and sorry we are to do so, that the fault was ours. We caused the collision with the McKee crew for the meanness they done us just before the race, in refusing us shelter from the rain in the Union Boat Club, where they had no more privileges than ourselves. It was there and then we conceived the idea of fouling them. We make this explanation that the public may know our reasons for the course pursued. As regards Henry Coulter, we will state we have no connection with the Xantha Club, and, furthermore, the imputations cast upon him in regard to his being cognizant of our intentions are false in every particular. We regret our act for the public sake and for Mr. Coulter's, but for none else interested.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10, 1870. THE NEW YORK CREW.

We are gratified to have this assurance that Coulter was in no wise to blame in the matter, and the crew at fault are deserving of commendation for this manly exoneration, however much their reprehensible action is to be condemned.

THE ATALANTA AND GULICK CLUBS.—The Atalantas having privately and publicly solicited another trial, not deeming the six oared shell race of the 5th inst., in the regatta of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association, a fair race, in consequence of being fouled by the Gulicks and washed by the steamboat Fort Lee, this brought a response from Captain W. H. Spear, of the Gulicks, in which he says:—

I am authorized to hereby challenge the six oared crew of your club that contested against us to row the same crew of the Gulick Club a three mile race, one and a half miles and return, over the same course as that rowed on the 5th inst., subject to the same rules and conditions, for a prize valued at from $1,000 to $3,000, at your own option.

Captain Withers, the stroke oarsman of the Atalantas, replied through the press, accepting the above proposition and naming Wednesday evening, 14th inst., at the Columbia Club House, as a place of meeting to arrange the details of the race. The Gulick representatives did not appear, and another meeting for Saturday evening, 17th inst., was arranged, at which both clubs was represented. After some little discussion the race could not be brought on, as the Gulicks desired the privilege of changing some of their men, which, as the reader will observe, is contrary to the wording of their own official challenge. The Atalantas are still ready to row the Gulicks the "same race, same course, same men and under the same rules and regulations," as soon as the Gulicks make a sign.

THAT LADIES' ROWING MATCH.—The communication which appears below nips in the bud the proposed match between young lady rowers, and its tenor is deserving of commendation:—

HARLEM, N. Y., September 13th, 1870.

TO MISS ROSA STEELE.—In response to your challenge to Miss Sheehan, who won the first prize in the ladies' race of the Empire City Rowing Club on the Harlem river, to row a match for stakes, I have to state on behalf of Miss Sheehan, that she declines the challenge, and to remark further that the ladies who rowed in the regatta do not intend to make rowing a profession. In complying with the request of the officers and members of the club to enter into the late friendly trial, nothing was further from their thoughts than that it would lead to a betting contest. They simply intended to show that ladies could exercise the oars with some skill and grace. Should the Empire City Rowing Club have a regatta during the next season, Miss Sheehan would be most happy to meet Miss Steele or any other lady in a similar friendly trial.

WILLIAM MULLEN, 126th street and Harlem river.

WE HAVE NOT yet heard anything definite relative to the proposed match between Renforth and Coulter, but everything wears a favorable aspect.

JAMES RENFORTH can obtain a letter by calling at or sending his address to this office.

THE EMPIRE CITY ROWING REGATTA COMMITTEE awarded the prizes won in the late regatta, at a gathering held at the hotel, corner of 119th street and Third avenue, on the evening of the 13th inst., at which speeches were made and a very pleasant time enjoyed by the select company present, embracing members of the club, judges and a few invited guests.

ANOTHER FEMALE ROWER.—Clara Louise Kellogg, the celebrated prima donna, rowed five miles on Greenwood Lake, near Hartford, Conn., a few days ago, in her new boat, we are informed. The boat is said to be a very handsome affair, the woods that compose it being in their natural state, and polished to the highest degree.

SCHUYLKILL NAVY VS. NASSAU.—The three mile race between four-oared crews belonging to the Schuylkill Navy, of Philadelphia, and the Nassau Club, of this city, which was fixed to take place on the Schuylkill on the 20th inst., has been postponed until the 22d, in consequence of a severe accident to one of the members of the Navy four.

A NEW YACHT.—The Messrs. Pollion have received an order for a new yacht for Capt. Samuells. She will be of about 945 tons measurement, 113 feet in length over all, 24 feet beam and 11 feet depth of hold.

THE AMATEUR SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIP of the Thames will be contested for on Aug. 27th, the prize being won by 26:06¾, accomplished the distance, 1¼ miles, in which no others.

PEDESTRIANISM.

THE AUSTRALIAN TEN MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The great match between Matt. Higgins, of Melbourne, champion, and Alfred Austin, of Sydney, distance ten miles, for a cup valued at $75, with $75 added, and the championship of Australia, took place on June 18th, on the Melbourne cricket ground. The weather was fine, but the ground soft and muddy in parts. Both men were in prime setzin. The course was as near as possible 880 yards round, three times round making within two or three yards of a mile; and to make everything sure the competitors started from a mark about 10 yds. from the winning post, which was near the pavilion gate. Higgins started away with the lead, and both men going along from the first at a steady pace; he kept in front by a yard or two until half way round for the 7th time, when, for variety's sake, Austin changed places with Higgins, and the latter trotted on contentedly some eight or ten yards behind. The 10th lap, nearly three miles and one third, was completed in 21½ mins.; and the 15th, half the distance all but 70 yds., in 32min. 1sec. Austin continued to lead until the 17th round, when Higgins came to the front, at this time they had a change, and, putting on a little spurt, got in front, but only for a short time, for, before the lap was finished, Austin was again showing the way. They changed places three times, until about two thirds of the way round in the 18th lap, when Higgins got well in front with a good lead. For the next eight or nine laps the lead was held by them alternately, and never for more than a few yards round, when, after 1hr. 2min. the 20th lap was finished in 44½secs. After the 24th round the spurting became more frequent, Higgins two or three times making his spurts in the most lively style. It began to be noticed that Austin was losing the erect style of carriage with which he started—a style far more erect than that of Higgins, but he still retained his steady stride, maching like in his regularity. The 30th round was completed in 56 min., and the 37th in 60 min. Austin was then leading, the men having been running well together. Higgins, after being thrown out a yard or two through some one getting in his way at the pavilion, got a good lead at the close of the lap. About 100 yds. past the pavilion in the 39th round, at the spot where most of the spurting had been done, Austin made an effort to get in front, but Higgins responded to his call and only further increased his lead. There was very little between them when they entered upon the last round. Passing the pavilion Austin was leading, but very quickly afterwards Higgins was once more ahead. At the booth opposite the pavilion he was nearly 10 yds. ahead, and his opponent, to all appearances, incapable of again catching him; but Higgins, not being there yet quite all right, broke off into a speed such as he usually exhibits in a half mile race for the last 300 yds., so to speak, flew along. Austin had no such dash of foot in reserve and was at once left 30 or 40 yds. behind. Higgins did not slacken his pace until the winning post was reached. The crowd cheered him excitedly, for such a finish, after so long a race, went far beyond what anybody had expected. The time was 1hour 7¼ min., very fair time, taking the account the sort of ground that the match was run over. Of the two men, Higgins appeared the least distressed, and 10 min. afterwards looked as fresh as when he had started.

THE INDIAN FOOT RACE.

DAILLEBOUT THE WINNER.

In our issue of last week we alluded to a scratch race arranged to take place on the Caledonian Grounds, Montreal, C. E., on the 12th inst., for a sweepstakes of $150, distance, four miles, the competitors being the Iroquois Indian, Deerfoot, and the Canghnawagna braves, Keraronwe and Daillebout. The course was rough, and in some places covered with coarse gravel only partially imbedded into the clay, so that all were forced to wear shoes, and even then there was some danger of the men sustaining injury from the sharp pebbles that protruded through the surface of the ground. The distance round was something over three miles, and the 12 laps were necessary to constitute four miles. After some little preparation the men toed the scratch, got the word "go," and sprang together like young greyhounds eager for the chase. At the end of the first lap the three were all close together, Deerfoot, however, leading by about a yard in advance, Keraronwe second, with Dearfoot close on his heels. On the second lap Keraronwe and Daillebout changed places, the former leading by about two yards, and Deerfoot somewhat further behind. This order continued until the four rounds were completed, when Daillebout gradually worked himself up and for the greater part of the fifth lap the two were shoulder to shoulder, each evidently near his topmost speed. On the sixth lap Keraronwe was seized with a fit in his side and was obliged to fall out. Before Daillebout had completed the lap, however, Keraronwe was again on the course and after him at full speed. The pain soon returned, though, and he was forced to fall out the second time and give the race up for lost. The struggle was now between Daillebout and Deerfoot. The former kept his distance in advance well, and on the tenth round was on the side of the course ahead, and still kept gaining on Deerfoot. On the fourteenth round Daillebout, as he neared the winning post, turned to look for his antagonist and ran for a short distance backwards, evidently thinking it was finishing the last lap. The last round Deerfoot gained very considerably, but was unable to cope with his younger and more active rival. Daillebout came in some 10 seconds ahead, and won the race in 21 min. 3 sec. The time by the winner on each lap was as follows:—1:06; 1:14; 1:24; 1:21; 1:22; 1:21; 1:26; 1:31; 1:28; 1:31; 1:28; 1:26; 1:28; 1:36, and 1:21. Total, 21:03. It is now reported that an agreement has been made with Daillebout to go to England to compete there for the championship some time next summer. Keraronwe has been so exhorbitant in his demands that it was found impossible to make any permanent arrangements with him.

LOOMIS AND WAY MATCHED.—The fears expressed by some that the proposed match between Chas. H. Loomis and Bob Way would not be made, in consequence of the latter insisting jumping at Middletown, N. Y., have proven groundless, as on the 17th inst. we were waited upon by representatives of Loomis, who placed in our hands the articles drawn up by Way and now duly signed by both men, and also depositing the sum of $150, the amount of the second deposit, called for on Wednesday, 21st inst., making $200 now on deposit on Loomis' behalf. Way's must be posted not later than four o'clock P. M. on the 21st inst. The articles bind the men to jump three standing jumps, spirit level, spring shoes barred, for $1,000 a side, at Middletown, N. Y., on the 12th day of October, Way to allow Loomis the sum of $50 for expenses, and the latter to give Bob the benefit of six inches. The gate money is to go to the winner, and the principals are to agree upon a final stakeholder after the arrival of Loomis at Middletown. The third deposit of $500 a side must be forthcoming on the 30th of September at this office; the fourth and final, of $500 a side, to be placed in the hands of the final stakeholder on the morning of the day named for the jump to take place. Both men have made extraordinary jumps, and the utmost confidence is evinced by their friends as to the result. Loomis is reported to have cleared 18ft. 6in. in a private trial, and is now matched with Searles, while Bob was defeated by Searles after covering 12ft. 11½in. He is accredited with still better performances than this in private, however, and his partisans think that Loomis is giving away too much, and that his colors will be struck on the day by "Old Bob."

THE CHAMPIONSHIP JUMPING MATCH.—Those celebrated jumpers, Ned Searles, champion, and Chas. H. Loomis, are to meet on Friday of the current week, Sept. 23d, to decide their championship match for $500 (or $1,000, if mutually agreeable) a side, one standing jump, eight trials, spirit level, spring shoes barred. The place fixed upon is Utica, the home of Loomis, who arrived from the "wilds of Illinoy" last week, accompanied by Messrs. Isaac B. Strer and James Schoonover, friends and backers, who were to proceed to Sing Sing on the 19th for the purpose of meeting Searles and making final arrangements, selecting a stakeholder, etc. Another two hundred dollars was staked for each man on the 17th, according to agreement, and if they conclude to make it for double the amount, the remaining $500 a side must be deposited with the final stakeholder on the 22d inst. Much interest is taken in this match by sporting men and the townsmen of the rivals, and that the character of the athletic display will warrant this interest the well known ability of the old rivals, for, if they do, the new series of games will be of no account as testing the playing strength of the two nines or settling the question of the supremacy between the two clubs for 1870. In other words, is it to be a money making scheme, with skill at ball play left out, or is it not?

A NEW BALL GROUND AT MONTGOMERY, ALA.—The lovers of the national game in Montgomery, Alabama, have determined not to be behind New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah and other southern cities in fixing up fit and proper places for exhibitions of the national game, which is daily becoming more and more popular through the south and southwest. With this view the Bonny Blues, of Montgomery, have leased a piece of ground about a quarter of a mile from the centre of the city, 500 feet by 700 feet, and have surrounded it with a board fence 8 feet high, and provided it with seats for 5,000 persons, hoping that during the coming winter some of the crack northern clubs would call at Montgomery, while en route for New Orleans. Our correspondent assures us that the whole city would turn out to see a game played by prominent clubs.

ATHLETIC VS. ENTERPRISE.—The Athletics, of Brooklyn, defeated the Enterprise, at the Capitoline grounds, Sept. 13th, by the following score:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Athletic	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—1
Enterprise	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—1

TUTTLE AND BAILEY VS. CHELSEA.—These crack junior organizations played a fine game on the Union grounds, Brooklyn, on Monday, the 12th, of which the following is the score by innings:—

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Tuttle and Bailey	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0

AMATEUR VS. BERGEN.—These two well known New Jersey organizations played the home and home game of their series on the 15th inst. at Newark, N. J., which resulted in a complete victory for the Amateurs by the following score:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Amateurs	2	0	0	1	1	1	0	4	0—9
Bergen	0	0	0	1	1	1	0	0	0—3

OLYMPIC, OF WASHINGTON, VS. WEST PHILADELPHIA.—These clubs played together on Sept. 14th at Philadelphia, with the appended result. Leech pitched for the Olympics—

Olympic	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
West Philadelphia	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	4	1—5

ATHLETIC VS. EXCELSIOR.—The Athletics had some sport with a lively ball on Sept. 12th with the Excelsiors. Score as follows:—

Athletic	12	10	7	10	11	10	7	9	1—86
Excelsior	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0

Umpire—Mr. A. C. M. Holbeck, of the West Philadelphia. Time of game—3 hours and 40 minutes.

THE CHAMPION CUP RACE.—The chief attraction now on the pedestrian calendar is the fifty mile walking match for the elegant cup offered by the champion long distance ped., James Smith, which is to take place at the Union base ball grounds, Tremont street, Boston, near the skating rink

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE RESULT OF THE DUEL.

Amongst the large number of guests whom Miss Anna Fubbs that evening entertained were, as will presently be seen, two gentlemen with whom we are already acquainted. The rest were all of them strangers to us, and we have no need to describe them further than to say that the gentlemen were fast, and the ladies belonged to that portion of society known as the demi monde. The table was luxuriously furnished, and noisily and extravagantly mirthful were the guests that gathered around it. If the joy of any there was forced it was not that of Viscount Lyttleton. Greville had seen his cousin leave the house with George Gladwin, and believed that the young doctor was about to restore Lord Lyttleton to his long neglected and unhappy wife. He was under the agreeable impression that the beautiful Ariadne, as he termed Miss Anna Fubbs, was about to be abandoned. No wonder then that Greville was in the highest spirits and with a good appetite for the luxuries that were waiting to be devoured. When the invited had crowded into the supper-room——

"I give you all notice," Miss Fubbs said to them, "that everybody must serve themselves; not a servant will be allowed to enter here."

"Well, then," cried the honorable Mr. Fortescue, "we, if you will graciously permit it, will be your servants."

"Are we not always your slaves?" added Captain Beauchamp.

Those pretty speeches were addressed to all the ladies, for whom the gentlemen proceeded to place chairs around the table. When presently there was a momentary lull in the noisy talk that had prevailed, Captain Beauchamp called across the table:—

"Is it true, Fortescue, that there is likely to be a change of ministry? if so, your brother——"

"Stop—stop!" cried one of the ladies; "no politics, if you please—we can't allow that."

"Decidedly not," cried every female voice.

"You will allow us to talk love, I suppose?" said Beauchamp.

"Not yet," cried Anna.

"You will let us know when, won't you?"

"Yes, yes; we will give you due notice," cried Greville Lyttleton.

"Beauchamp," said the lady who had before spoken, "I wish you would be so good as not to drink out of my glass.

"Pray excuse me, beautiful Bella," replied Beauchamp, "but I did it on purpose;"

"Notice has not yet been given," returned Bella, and all laughed.

Suddenly addressing Viscount Lyttleton, who had seated himself next to her, Anna said:—

"I wish you would not stare so hard at me, viscount.

"'Tis admiration," replied Greville.

"And what makes you so full of smiles this evening?"

"Because, to be seated thus beside you renders me so supremely happy."

"I shall tell your cousin."

"Oh, no, you won't," said Greville, with a significance of manner which was not rightly comprehended by Miss Anna Fubbs.

Greville held towards her his empty glass and she filled it for him with champagne. Holding aloft his glass:—

"Here, in this sparkling wine, I see the future," said the viscount.

"Whose future," demanded Anna.

"Yours—and ——"

"Don't talk rubbish, Greville."

"Call you my adoration rubbish? I must punish you for that," cried the viscount, and threw his arms around, and kissed Miss Fubbs.

"Well," exclaimed the lady, whom we have heard called Bella, "if that isn't a notice for the rest of us, what is?"

"I shall certainly tell your cousin," said Anna; and the viscount laughed again in that peculiar manner which the lady had before observed, and by which she had been somewhat puzzled and annoyed.

"What a long time he is away," presently cried Anna.

"Who? my angel," asked Greville.

"Your cousin, of course," petulantly answered Miss Fubbs. "Whom else could I mean?"

"No, true—exactly," said the viscount, and smiled again.

"I think, Greville, you are growing quite silly!"

"Love produces that effect with most of us."

"There, there, hold your tongue."

Filling her glass—

"Order, for a moment, if you please, ladies and gentlemen—I am about to propose a toast."

"Let's have it," was the general cry.

"Are your glasses charged?"

"Yes, yes."

"Well then—Here's to Lady Lyttleton!"

There was a roar of laughter, in which Greville alone joined not. He replaced his glass untasted, and muttered to himself something not at all complimentary to Miss Fubbs.

"To Lady Lyttleton," repeated Anna.

"Which Lady Lyttleton," laughingly asked Captain Beauchamp.

"There is but one gentlemen," quite sternly responded the viscount.

"You are mistaken, viscount," said Anna, tossing her head; "there are two, and I am quite as good as the other."

"Come, come, enough of this," angrily cried the viscount.

"Oh, but I am," proceeded Anna. "Am I not loved as she has been, and am I not also an artiste?"

"An artiste! you?"

Those words were spoken by no one at the table, and great was the effect that they produced. Turning quickly to discover where and from whom they had proceeded, all saw, standing in the doorway, two women, both of whom were cloaked and closely veiled.

"Know you even what is an artiste?" said the tallest female of those two, and the one who before had spoken.

The viscount started at the sound of her voice. Miss Fubbs was preparing to bluster, but the veiled lady with a sweep of her arm imposed silence on the heretofore waiting maid, and proceeded:—

"An artiste is the woman who has devoted her life to the worship of all that is beautiful of all that is noble—it is a woman who has but one desire, but one ambition—to steal a spark of that sacred fire which is termed genius. A songstress, she who, by dint of study and of labor, is at length able to acquire the secrets of a divine harmony. And a danseuse is she who shatters her body as the others exhaust their soul, and whom heaven recompenses by giving to them wings."

She paused, but no one spoke, indeed all were just then too greatly astonished for words.

"Yes," resumed the veiled lady, and pointedly addressing Anna, "yes all those are artistes. Those for one hour of triumph, without regret condemn themselves to days without repose, to nights without pleasure—you an artiste! Well, let us see, answer me. What have you done with your days? What have you done with your nights?"

Again she paused, but neither Anna nor any other there attempted to speak.

"Since you will not say I will tell you. You and your like have made a trade of art, have made of the stage a pedestal for your infamy. Enrich yourselves in your boudoirs, but no longer degrade art, no longer dishonor the stage."

"Bravo, bravo," now, half ironically cried Beauchamp.

"Remove your veils, you two," shouted Fortescue.

"Yes, yes, away with them," chorused the guests.

The viscount planted himself before the two women.

"Which of you, gentlemen," he demanded, "will venture to remove them?"

No one stirred.

"Oh, but," cried Miss Fubbs, in a perfect fury, "I must and will know who is this woman that dares to insult me in my own house."

"Your house?" indignantly cried Lucy, snatching away her veil and revealing herself to all.

The effect that she thus produced may be very easily imagined. Sophy was very glad to follow her sister's example, for she had been suffocating with indignation and want of air.

"Oh, why are you here?" Greville said, whispering to Lady Lyttleton.

And she, in the same tone, answered:—

"I have learned all—and have come——"

Then she interrupted herself to turn wrathfully towards Anna, and to exclaim:—

"You said, I think, your house? That is false! Here you are in my husband's, Lord Lyttleton's house—you are here in my house."

"Oh, indeed!" said Anna, with a defiant tone and manner.

"Yes," said Sophy, "and if you wish us to prove it to you that won't take us long."

"Did you speak to me, my good woman," disdainfully cried Miss Fubbs.

"You are in my house, I tell you," pursued Lucy, "and you must perfectly well comprehend that we cannot both of us remain here."

"Well, I never!" said Anna, with a forced laugh, and about to flop down into a seat.

But Sophy snatched away the chair, saying:—

"It isn't worth your while to sit down, considering the short time you are going to stay."

"Ah! I see," said Lucy, "I asked you but now what you did with your nights—you sell them, do you not well!" and Lucy scornfully threw a purse to her former waiting woman—"now you are paid, so, go—away with you!"

Miss Fubbs strove to retort, but she was suffocating with a rage that rendered her inarticulate. She glanced towards her guests, as if expecting assistance from them, but they averted their heads, and, as if ignoring her presence, in low tones, conversed with each other. They were satisfied that Miss Anna's game was played out, and that she was not likely soon to have it in her power to give any more grand parties. Lyttleton had stated that all belonging to her should be packed, and within half an hour had quitted the house. Almost at the moment that Miss Fubbs quitted the room at one door, a footman, looking pale and scared, came hurrying in at another. A dozen voices at once asked of him what had happened, and while the man was recovering breath to answer, many of the guests came to the conclusion that Miss Anna Fubbs, in her desperation, had either committed suicide or had set fire to the house. Others there were who had no doubt that she had perpetrated both those crimes. But they found their conjectures were at fault, for as soon as the affrighted footman had recovered breath and courage to speak:—

"Just now," he said, "I heard a pistol shot, that came from the further end of the garden——"

"Fubbs has blown her brains out," cried one of the ladies of the parties.

"That's impossible," said another, "for she never had any."

"Three of us," continued the footman, "ran off to see what was the matter, and found that a duel had been fought——"

"Between whom?" anxiously inquired Greville.

"Lord Lyttleton and a stranger——"

The viscount understood now what had been the purpose of his cousin and George Gladwin when he had seen them leaving the house together. Lucy, too, comprehended who had been her husband's antagonist, and almost overpowering was her emotion. The footman further said that one of the combatants had fallen, which of them he knew not. All hurried to the spot of the encounter and saw George Gladwin extended bleeding on the ground, supported by the friend who had been his second in the duel, while a doctor, with ominous looks was examining his wound. Lord Lyttleton had fled. Gladwin had never entertained a thought to deprive Lucy of her husband, but had resolved to separate him from that woman by whom he had been so strangely enthralled. He received without returning Lyttleton's fire; and when he saw Lucy bending over him, faintly gasped:—

"Lord Lyttleton has quitted London; they will tell you where he may be found; he expects you. Go to him—go to him——"

"Ah! true and devoted friend," sobbed Lucy.

"I owed you a heavy debt of gratitude, and I have paid it," faintly whispered Gladwin, and then all consciousness left him.

"For mercy's sake, doctor," exclaimed the agitated viscount, "say that he will live!"

The doctor replied only with a mournful shake of the head.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

AFTER THE DUEL.

As Lucy, with her sister, quitted that fatal spot——

"You heard poor Gladwin," said Sophy; "your husband expects you."

Lucy bitterly smiled.

"Yes, now that he is forcibly separated from that woman, he would graciously condescend to receive his wife. He does not return to me, but will suffer that I may come to him."

"You know, sister, that he may not at this time return to your common home."

"And whose fault is that?" cried Lucy. "An hour since he might have returned to me, and would not; that is very clear, else wherefore that encounter, in which but one weapon was discharged, and in which one of the best and bravest men ventured the life that he will surely lose, with the hope that so he might purchase for me a renewal of former happiness?"

"And will you baffle his intentions?"

"I will not go to Lord Lyttleton; the insult, the outrage he has inflicted on me, I cannot pardon."

"But if he sincerely repents?"

"Yes, repents his separation from that woman—once my servant; oh, it is too humiliating, too degrading."

"Yes, Lucy dear, but that is not what I meant."

"Well, in any case, his repentance comes too late to satisfy me—Repent as he may, we are forever separated; never will I see him more—and, oh heaven," she exclaimed, bursting into tears, "how deeply, how devotedly I have loved that faithless man!"

Sophy called the viscount to her aid, and he endeavored to move his cousin's wife from the resolution she had formed. But his efforts, too, were all in vain; and he did not condemn, but in his heart applauded her determination. Lucy would not even once again return to his lordship's mansion, to claim there what was properly her own, but sped away to the home and protection of good old Andrew Wentworth. The worthy old actor shed tears of sympathy over her sorrow, and welcomed her as a long lost and dearly beloved daughter. Andrew Wentworth had been totally unable from his professional earnings to lay by anything for his old age. That which he might and no doubt would have saved, had gone for the support of the girl he had so generously adopted, during those many years ere the talent she possessed was made known to the public. Since his retirement from the stage Lucy had furnished him with a moderate maintenance, more he had refused to accept from her. When so unexpectedly she came to him for shelter and protection he had but very little money in his possession, and had been indeed in daily expectation of receiving a fresh supply from Lady Lyttleton. But her ladyship came to him with empty pockets, having left her purse where we have seen her so contemptuously throw it. Lucy had about her person, however, some valuable jewelry, sufficient to furnish means for a considerable time, for the joint support of herself and the good old man whom she so loved and reverenced. Able to provide for their bodily wants in the present, Lucy had a half formed resolve concerning the future. At all events she would rely on herself alone, and had done forever with all who bore the name of Lyttleton. Such at least was her present determination. Andrew Wentworth's residence was a small cottage, consisting of four rooms only, and very simply, and yet quite neatly furnished. There was a small piece of ground at the back of the house, which had furnished both employment and amusement for the retired actor; and in front of the dwelling, another small garden, with the single tree of which Wentworth has already told us. The front garden was enclosed by low wooden palings, painted a bright green, and a little gate, hardly distinguishable, being formed exactly like the palings, gave admittance to the garden and on to the short graveled path that led up to the door of the house. On the morning after the duel Viscount Lyttleton quitted London and hastened to his cousin, who had fled to concealment, with a firm conviction that George Gladwin could not possibly long survive the wound he had received. Beholding Greville alone——

"Where is my wife," inquired his lordship, "why is she not with you?"

"She has gone to take up her abode with old Andrew Wentworth," replied the viscount.

"She has quitted my mansion?"

"Never again she has said to return to it; she has vowed never to see you more."

"But she will not keep that vow?" faltered his lordship, and trembling with agitation.

"I fear she will do so," replied Greville. "And surely you can scarcely wonder, for you have tried her sorely."

"Oh, I have been mad," raved Lyttleton—"am in every way a wretch—the veriest, most cowardly wretch that ever breathed."

"Ah," said Greville, "if this remorse had but overtaken you a little sooner."

"Madmen know no remorse; but now, now, when too late, I have recovered my reason. Oh, never till this moment did I really know how dear to me is the angel to whom I have shown myself as a monster. I have wrecked her happiness and my own, and have slain the man before whom I should have bowed and worshipped."

"Yes, indeed," sighed Greville, "if you would have listened to poor Gladwin——"

"I tell you I have been mad," exclaimed his lordship.

"Yes, certainly, your infatuation for that debased creature——"

"It was not that when Gladwin appealed to me."

"What then?" Greville incredulously demanded.

"My miserable pride. I could not resolve to yield to his entreaties and upbraidings, could not consent to return and sue for pardon to the wife I had so deeply injured."

Lord Lyttleton would have risked anything in order to fly to Lucy, to kneel at her feet and implore that she would pardon him, but Greville would not suffer that. The viscount undertook to be bearer of a letter from his cousin to the injured wife, and to second it with all his eloquence. Lord Lyttleton wrote hurriedly and distractedly a letter covered with protestations of his repentance and remorse, and with declarations of his undying love for Lucy. That letter she received from the hands of the viscount, and read with an agony that almost killed her. But it did not shake the resolution she had formed; it had, perhaps, come too soon, the insult and the injury she had received were too recent, their memory too fresh within her mind and heart. The viscount kept his word to his cousin, and pleaded strenuously on his lordship's behalf. That Lord Lyttleton loved his wife as deeply as he professed, and that his repentance and remorse were as sincere as he asserted, Greville was, he assured Lucy, most thoroughly convinced. But if his cousin's passionate letter could not cause Lady Lyttleton to relent, the viscount had no hope in his own eloquence to effect that desirable end. He returned, as he had expected, an unsuccessful ambassador. And, as then he beheld the depth of his cousin's despair, Greville's heart bled for him. Greatly had Lord Lyttleton erred, most terribly now was he punished. The Crimean war had not long commenced, and Greville, after long reflection on what had best be done under the circumstances, proposed that Lord Lyttleton and himself should hasten to the Crimea, and join their countrymen there in the war with Russia. His lordship eagerly consented. In the farewell letter he wrote to his wife, he said:—

"You will have your wish, for you will never see me more. I will not again attempt my own life, but none the less have I resolved to die."

Lucy had been alone to read that letter; and when after awhile Andrew Wentworth entered the apartment, he saw the poor unhappy wife extended on the floor, and the letter, which had dropped from her hand, lying open near her.

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

A CLERICAL LOTHARIO.

HE SEDUCES SEVERAL YOUNG LADIES AND ELOPES WITH A MARRIED WOMAN.

About two years ago there appeared in Aman, He said New York, a man named Thurlow Tw—, exclusive hobby that he came there on a mission. Not soon after his arrival he expressed a wish the establishment of a Methodist church in—hole's eye. The people were at first distrustful of their ability to support a minister, but he overcame this objection by agreeing that, if by the time that the church should be finished they were no better able to do so, he would himself act in the pulpit until their means would allow them to employ a regularly licensed preacher. His proposition satisfied the people, subscriptions were started, and the church was quickly erected and soon afterwards opened. Tresselman then took his place in the pulpit. It was noticeable that he most often visited the handsome young ladies attending his Sunday school, although he did not slight the residences of prepossessing married women. Fathers and husbands failed to entertain any feeling of jealousy or suspicion towards him on account of their confidence in the goodness of the work in which he was engaged.

The delusions under which they had been laboring were suddenly dispelled, however. Some time ago vague rumors were circulated, alleging that Tresselman's relations to one or two young lady members of his congregation had been none of the purest. These were not believed at first, but were rather set down as bits of gossip. One young maiden, named Annie Haight, who has been under his tuteiage, could no longer conceal her condition from the knowledge of the villagers, but she refused at first to reveal the name of her seducer. When her condition became known, several other maidens alleged that they could name him, and pointed to Tresselman as the guilty party. When pressed to divulge the source of their information it was discovered that they had themselves, in some cases, fallen victims to his wiles, or in others had been the objects of improper advances on his part. It was not until he had been thus unmistakably pointed out that Miss Haight was willing to confess that Tresselman was her seducer.

The first impulse of the people on making this discovery was to lynch the man, but his address saved him from this punishment. When a committee of the villagers waited upon him to demand an explanation, he stigmatised the statement as being false, and said they originated on the part of some girls by a desire to hide their real seducer from exposure. He finally advised them to investigate the charges before they took final action or perpetrated the threatened deed of violence. It was subsequently arranged to hold a meeting on Monday evening, for the purpose of going into a formal hearing. Monday evening came, but no Tresselman. Inquiries on Tuesday revealed the fact that he had been seen driving out of the village on Monday morning, but no particular trace could be found of him. Among those connected with his congregation was a lady named Hurst, whose husband was a traveler in Europe. Mrs. Hurst was reported to have decamped with him. On investigation her home was found to be locked and barred. The neighbors, thinking the circumstances justified them, broke into the house and found that Mrs. Hurst's clothes had all been removed. The following note was discovered addressed to her husband:—

DEAR HERMAN.—Don't think of me any more as your wife. I have gone with the only man I ever loved. You are much older than I, though you have been to me all that I could expect. But I would never be happy with you again.

What steps will next be taken toward the clerical Lothario's arrest has not yet been ascertained.—Boston Herald, Sept. 10th.

MARRY IN HASTE, REPENT AT LEISURE.

The suit of Zadaicenia Crowe, both for divorce from her husband, T. D. Crowe, and also to have her marriage to him declared null and void, an account of the former hearing of which we gave in last week's CLIPPER, was again resumed at the Superior Court on the 12th inst. Some additional affidavits were then read on the part of Mrs. Crowe, in rebuttal of those presented on the 9th on behalf of her husband. Stella Hill, the alleged cousin of Mrs. Crowe, who was married at the same time to Frank Noe, Crowe's partner in the real estate business, swore that the affidavits of the officiating clergyman and the hackman, vouching for the sobriety of the party, were erroneous. Zadaicenia was not, she said, in a composed state of mind, but, on the contrary, was in a state of hysterical laughter. Just before leaving the hotel for the church, Crowe gave Zadaicenia a drink, which he called lemonade, that soon made her almost senseless. When she was in that condition Crowe sent for $2 worth of brandy, which he poured down her throat with one hand while he held her with the other. She was then assisted to the coach and they were driven to the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Twentieth street. She refused to alight, but was forced to go in. Augustus F. Anderson made affidavit that Crowe had forged his mother's signature to a promissory note. Mrs. H. L. Rich, at whose boarding house in Lexington avenue the young women sought board after their flight from Katonah, Westchester county, where they were spending their honeymoon, testified that they told her that they were married, but didn't want their husbands to know of it. Mrs. Thereabouts, John Huber, who keeps the boarding house in Thirty-second street, where they subsequently went, testified that previous to the admission of the young women his house had borne the highest reputation. He knew nothing of their character while they remained there. They were accompanied by an elderly gentleman, who gave his name as Wright, and paid their board in advance. He said they were his nieces, who named Wright. While they were there no one called to see them except that same gentleman—whom Mr. Crowe alleges to be Mr. Royal Houghton—Mr. Noe, Stella Hill's husband, and Ladaicenia's attorney. Mr. Charles S. Spencer, who, with Mr. Frank Henocque, appeared as counsel for Crowe, called the attention of the court to the allegation that two dollars worth of brandy had been poured down a woman's throat. He thought such a quantity of brandy sufficient to kill any one of his acquaintance friends he saw around him, though they were pretty well seasoned. (Laughter.) Judge Jones inquired whether the plaintiff's counsel meant to have it understood by the affidavit of Stella Hill that she was present when the brandy was poured down Zadaicenia's throat, and that she then accompanied her to the minister's and saw her forced into a marriage, and then immediately got married herself. Mr. Reavey answered in the affirmative. Judge Jones then remarked that there was a question of law which the counsel appeared to have overlooked. Alimony and counsel fee were asked for only in a case where the law fixed the responsibility upon the husband of supporting his wife—one who was legally his wife. Here it was claimed that the marriage was void, and that the parties were not therefore husband and wife; and it was attempted to set aside the marriage on the ground that it was procured by force and fraud. In such a case alimony could not be granted. He should decide upon the questions of law in the case before deciding upon the validity of the marriage.

HOW HE LOST HIS WATCH, &C.—A young man by the name of Frank Hall, of Brooklyn, L. I., whilst walking up Fulton avenue, in that city, a few evenings ago, fell in with a charming girl named Mary White, who appeared very anxiously to make his acquaintance. Frank followed suit and fell in with her, and they both walked up as far as No. 445 Hudson avenue, where he was boarding. She accompanied him to his room and remained there a short time, when she left and went her own way alone. After her departure Frank missed his watch and chain, valued at about $100. He thought that no one save his charmer could have taken them. Furthermore, he says he saw her take them. He started to find her, but did not meet with any success in his search until two or three evenings afterwards, when he met her again and then caused her arrest. And the above was his version of the affair when before Justice Walsh. Mary's story, however, differed considerably from it. She had been indulging somewhat freely in fluid that evening, and when Frank met her she was in rather a "conloosin condish." She went as far as his house with him, when he forced her to go to his room and remain there a short time. He then told her that she must leave, and in order to effect a hasty retreat on her part he put her out and slammed the door in her face. A few evenings afterwards she met him again, when he insisted upon her accompanying him home again. Mary refused to do anything of the kind, whereupon Frank kicked up a row in the street, called for the police and had her arrested for stealing the watch and chain. The defendant, who is a good looking unmarried woman, about 30 years of age, stoutly denied having stolen the property. She stated that she lived at No. 237 Union street, and gave her occupation as that of laundress. Justice Walsh held her to await the action of the grand jury.

SERVES HIM RIGHT.—On the 23d of January, 1860, Patrick Lynch, of Dublin, married Jane Lynch Curran, and for some years they lived together in happiness. Miss Curran's parents enjoyed a comfortable competency, and gave their daughter on her marriage £500. This she gave to her husband to aid him in starting a business. Everything went on smoothly until at the end of six years Lynch became involved in difficulties and was cast into jail, but on the intercession of his wife and her friends he was released. Lynch then determined to quit the land of his birth, and with his wife sailed for New York, arriving in this city on the 15th of August, 1866, bringing several hundred pounds. Here Lynch started a grocery, and by perseverance soon built up a flourishing trade. But in May last, Lynch, who had become infatuated with his servant, Julia Gorman, informed his wife that he was about to revisit his native land, and wished her to accompany him. This she willingly consented to do. Accordingly they started for Ireland on the 11th of May, and visited the wife's paren s; thence Lynch decamped, leaving his wife with her friends. He set sail for New York, and his wife started after him, arriving within three days of his vessel. It was found that Lynch was living with his old servant; therefore his wife determined to apply for a divorce. Judge Daly has decreed a nullification of the marriage, and ordered Lynch to pay $500 a year alimony, the option being left to his wife whether she will marry again. Mr. John G. Boyd, whose office is in the CLIPPER Building, was the counsel for the wife, and by the brevity of the case, eighteen days only, and the lucrative result for his client, has proven the fulness of his competency as a lawyer.

WRESTLING IN AUSTRALIA.—An off-hand wrestling match, for £100 a side, took place at Melbourne, Australia, in June, between Tom Padon, a noted wrestler of the colonies, and Geo. Scott, a new arrival from England, with the character of being the champion of light weights at home. The match was to be decided by the first ten throws, and Padon proved triumphant, gaining the required number of falls to his opponent's three.

JACK GOULDING was at Keokuk, Iowa, last week, where he was to perform his athletic feats during the state fair. From thence he intended going to Ottumwa and Omaha, Neb.

CRESCENT CITY YACHT CLUB.

THE CHALLENGE CUP RACE.

Thursday, Sept. 8th, will long be remembered by the lovers of yachting in New Orleans, La., as the day on which the C. C. Y. C. closed their season of 1870, and on which occasion Lake Ponchartrain behaved with admirable propriety, giving the gallant Creoles who lined the shore, and their more fortunate friends who owned boats, a steady, stiff breeze from the east, which sent the boats scudding to and fro like so many sea gulls, the weather overhead being as fine as the most fastidious could have wished for. Under the rules of the C. C. Y. C. the Challenge Cup must be sailed for every year, the fortunate winner returning it to the club a few days prior to each race for it. In 1866 Mr. C. T. Howard won it with his gallant little Xiphias. In 1869 he entered the Protos against the Limnas to sail for it, and won the race, but in consequence of the Protos fouling one of the stake-boats the race was decided "no race," and the Cup remained in the hands of the club. On the 8th inst. it was again put up for contest, and brought out four entries, viz.:—Limnas, Protos, Mathilda and Domino, the first three yachts being the centre of attraction. The course was the customary seven and a half miles, four yachts twice around, and at the first gun Limnas, Domino, took their positions, as follows:—Start was effected at Mathilda and Protos. A long the lead, followed by the Limnas, standing off to southward and Domino and Protos going off on the opposite tack by compass. The first stake-boat was turned at 1.54 by the Mathilda, the Limnas following her at 1.55½ and the Protos at 55 seconds later. The run to the second stake-boat was made with a free sheet, both the Limnas and Protos closing up on the Mathilda. The run to the home stake-boat was under close hauled mainsails, and was beautifully contested, the wind having freshened considerably. The Mathilda still retained the lead, turned the stake-boat 32 seconds ahead of the Limnas and 52 seconds ahead of the Protos. The Domino, which was virtually out of the race from the start, did not show up for some 20 minutes. After passing the stake-boat the Mathilda and Limnas both continued on the same tack, to the southeast, but the Protos—who was sailed by that incomparable sailor, Johnny Clements—put about and stood under a close haul for the first stake-boat, a manœuvre which was highly applauded, as it at once put him ahead of the Limnas and almost even with the Mathilda, both of whom had to tack before they could make the stake-boat, while the Protos just fetched it to a nicety, 20 seconds behind the Mathilda and 25 secs. ahead of the Limnas. In the run to the second stake-boat the Protos gained rapidly on the Mathilda, and for half a mile sailed so even with her that from the shore but one yacht could be seen, while the Limnas gained on both of them; the Protos finally got away from the Mathilda and took the lead, the Limnas, after a short race with the M., doing the same thing. The stake-boat was finally reached and turned by the Protos, 22 seconds ahead of the Limnas, and 35 seconds ahead of the Mathilda. The final run home was very exciting, and, as the wind was rapidly hauling to the southward it improved the chances of the Limnas and Mathilda, both of whom claimed time of the Protos, the former 5½ seconds and the latter 13½. But Clements, who had made all his calculations with the skill of an experienced navigator, brought his beautiful craft home in a style that won the admiration of all, especially from the party backing Mahony's pet, the Limnas, who was third in the race, the Mathilda having passed her during the run home, getting in second, 1 minute and 18 seconds behind the Protos, who led the Limnas 2 minutes and 44 seconds and the Domino 32 minutes and 28 seconds. By the success of the Protos Mr. C. T. Howard will again hold the much coveted cup for another year, and thus end the season of 1870. The boats will return to their winter quarters at Biloxi and other points on the coast, while their owners turn their attention to cotton, sugar, the law, etc. The C. C. Y. C. regret that their challenge and purse of $5,000 failed to induce any representative from the many crack yacht clubs of northern waters to put in an appearance at New Orleans; but, as they intend to offer the same next season, they will live in hope of better luck. The following is the summary of the race:—

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8, 1870.—Regatta for the challenge cup of the Crescent City Yacht Club, at the Lake End of the Pontchartrain Railroad, the winning yacht to receive, in addition to the challenge cup, a prize, value $150; the second yacht a prize, value $100; the prizes to be in money or silver plate, at the option of the winner.

THREE MILE SCULLING RACE.

BEST TIME ON RECORD.

The shores of Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, Mass., were visited by about one thousand persons on the afternoon of Wednesday, Sept. 14th, when the match between J. J. O'Leary, of that place, and P. Harrington, of Springfield, to row three miles for $250 a side, was decided. Both men were were well known as excellent handlers of the blade and the anticipation of witnessing a good race was the inducement which attracted so many persons to the scene, about one half of whom were denizens of Springfield, the adherents of the rivals being about equally divided. At the annual regatta, held at Worcester, last July, O'Leary won the two-mile wherry race in 16:11¼. At the City Regatta in Lowell on the 4th of July, he came in second in 16:39, John Landers of that city taking first prize. Harrington has won a number of races, in Springfield waters chiefly, but always in a light fish-boat and skiff, although he had previously trained for a wherry race in which his opponent backed down. He received a shot in his right arm when in the army, and as a result that arm is partially disabled, but he is a plucky fellow and no mean antagonist. O'Leary weighs about one hundred and seventy-five pounds, and is familiarly called "the giant." Harrington is much lighter, weighing only 145. Harrington, trained under the direction of Mike Horrigan, of Springfield, while O'Leary was in charge of Thomas Butler, of Boston. Jeremiah Foley was O'Leary's backer, and Harrington was backed by several of his Springfield friends. Betting was in favor of Harrington. The judges at the upper stake were Edward B. Hamilton for Harrington and Daniel Downey for O'Leary; at the lower stake, R. J. Hamilton, of Springfield, and Stedman Clark were the judges, and C. B. Pratt the referee. Harrington made his appearance first, wearing white pants and shirt, and a green handkerchief, and pulling the 33 foot paper shell that Hamilton pulled in the city regatta in July. O'Leary, who had been waiting the appearance of his opponent, soon came out of the boat-house, wearing white pants and handkerchief, but no shirt; a pale blue cedar shell, 32 feet long, and provided with the new style of sliding seat. Receiving instructions to pull round the upper stake from right to left, according to the agreement, Mr. Pratt said:—"Are you ready? Go!" A most excellent start was made, Harrington taking the water a trifle first, and the boats went up the lake together, both men pulling about the same stroke. O'Leary turned the upper stake first, but on the home-stretch the contest was apparently a close thing, first one appearing to be ahead then the other. As they approached Regatta Point it was seen that Harrington was in front and his friends were jubilant. O'Leary, however, had a reserve force, and believing the time had come for exerting it, he gradually came up alongside of his opponent, pushed slowly ahead, showed clear water between his stern and Harrington's bow and came in first in 22:05. Harrington held up a trifle when he was beaten, but he came in in 22:11¼, the best time he ever made. Inquiries being made if everything was fair, Harrington informed the judges that it was a good square race, in which he was fairly outrowed, and congratulated O'Leary on his success. The time made by both parties is unprecedented, the best previous three mile time being 22:27, made by Hamill. The best time ever made in a similar race on Lake Quinsigamond was in 1867, when Walter Brown pulled the three miles against time in 23 minutes. The correctness of the measurement of this course, upon which the best three mile time in every species of craft has been made, has always been disputed, and those interested owe it to themselves to prove whether or not these doubts are well founded; otherwise the time made there will always be discredited.

REGATTA OF THE SOUTH BOSTON CLUB.

The first annual regatta of this young and promising organization took place on the 15th inst. The day was pleasant, with just wind enough to keep all hands constantly on the alert. The yachts were divided into two classes, the first being for all over 25 feet, the second, all under that measurement, the differences in the allowance of time being 30 seconds to the foot, centre-board yachts counting two feet more than their actual length over keel built boats. The course for the boats of the first class was from the judges' boat down the bay, leaving Thompson's Island on the starboard, Spectacle Island on the port, Long Island on the port, NIX's Mate on the starboard, Fort Independence on the starboard, to the judges' boat, passing it to windward, a distance of about nine miles; while that for the second class was from the judges' boat down the bay, leaving Thompson's Island on the starboard, Spectacle Island on the port, Sculpin Ledge buoy on the port, Spectacle Island on the port, back to judges' boat, passing it to windward a distance of nearly six miles. Shortly after 1 P. M. the signal gun was fired for the yachts of the first class to take positions, and at 1.53 P. M. the signal for the start was given, when the sloops Psyche, Kelpie and Annie, and the schooners Starlight, Mercury and Ranger got away handsomely together. Soon after the yachts of the second class took their positions, and at 2.27 P. M. the following started:—Schooners E. Harris, Ella, Phantom, and the sloops Gleaner, Volante, Mystery, Flie and Ours. The contest between the Psyche and Starlight, of the first class, was a neck and neck affair on the start, but after they rounded Thompson's Island the Psyche rapidly went ahead, and finally won the race, although she lost considerable time in picking up one of her crew, who was knocked overboard by her main boom while off Long Island. The following is the order in which the boats of the two classes came in, with the time made by each in sailing over the courses:—

BASE BALL.

ATHLETIC vs. MUTUAL.

These Philadelphian and New York professional clubs played their home-and-home game together on the Union grounds, Brooklyn, on Sept. 16th, in the presence of fully [illegible] within the enclosure, while as many again were outside, [illegible] ascending the peeping brigade. The half dollar fee of admission did not prevent a large attendance, the admirers of the game never begrudging even twice that amount when assured of witnessing a fine display of the beauties of the game and an exciting contest between nines who try their best to win.

The Athletics came on here confident of winning, and a large majority of the spectators seemed to favor their view of the issue, as the betting was 100 to 80 on the Philadelphians, with few takers. The Mutuals went into the fight determined to earn success at least, and, consequently, the game was commenced under circumstances well calculated to ensure an exciting trial of skill. Mr. Charles Glover, of the Empire Club, was selected as umpire, after the Athletics had refused the services of Ferguson, of the Atlantics, who is a thoroughly impartial man. Reach opened play at the bat, but he was finely fielded out by Hatfield, and McBride would have been the second victim but for a muff by Nelson. Afterwards bases were made on hits and two runs were scored. On the other side the Mutuals failed to punish McBride, and, consequently, retired minus a run. First blood for Philadelphia, with their stock well up in the market.

In the second innings the two first Athletic strikers were early disposed of, but now occurred an accident which almost made a victory for the Athletics a foregone conclusion. McBride was at the bat, when he hit a sharp foul ball which struck C. Mills directly in the eye. "Time" was called. Charley retired to repair damages, and when the game was resumed Hatfield was found in the catcher's position, Eggler and Short field and McMahon in the centre field. Before the innings terminated the Athletics had added 3 runs to their score. On the Mutual side one run was scored by errors in the field, and as the totals now showed the Athletics to be in the van by the totals of 5 to 1, with one of the best players of the Mutuals placed hors du combat, things looked very badly for New York investments, while Philadelphia stock was at a high premium.

In the 3d innings neither nine added to their score; neither handling the ash with any effect, the pitching being excellent on both sides. In the fourth innings C. Mills, having had his black eye lanced and attended to, concluded that he would "go one eye on it anyhow," and as he walked to his position and the nine resumed their regular places in the field, he was greeted with a round of applause for his pluck, and at once a feeling of renewed confidence was inspired among the Mutuals and one of the best up-hill fights on record was inaugurated. By some overthrowing on the Mutual side the Athletics were assisted to 3 runs on this innings. This gain the Mutuals offset with 3, they, too, being assisted by errors. In the 5th innings both nines went into the whitewash business, both nines handling the brush stylishly.

In the 6th innings the Athletics were finely fielded out for a blank score, and the Mutuals, beginning to get the range of McBride's delivery, secured 3 runs, Hatfield lifting the ball for four bases. In the 7th innings the Athletics got on the train for Chicago by mistake, the Mutuals picking up 3 runs in their innings, an advantage which at once gave a very different aspect to the game to what it possessed three innings previously. The close of the 7th innings left the Mutuals in the van by a score of 9 to 8. Now began the exciting period of the contest. Though, in a measure, it was anybody's game at present, still the manner in which the Mutuals had recovered their lost ground placed them in a very advantageous position in the game, as it was natural that their opponents, having an almost assured victory taken from their grasp, should become a little demoralized. The Athletics, however, did not give in, but went to work in good earnest to regain their advantageous lead, and, by some good batting, added a run to their score, and then, fielding sharply, disposed of their adversaries for a blank, leaving the score equal, 9 to 9 at the close of the 8th innings.

At this period of the game there was a very general feeling of sin't-you-glad-you-come-itiveness among the spectators, for the match now promised to be the most closely contested and exciting game of the season. As the Mutuals took their positions in the field in the last innings and the Athletics took the bat for the last time, silence reigned supreme and the suspense was actually fearful. The least error on either side might settle the question, and a fine play win the game.

Berry opened with a high foul, which one-eyed Charley took on the fly, and wild was the cheer which greeted the performance. Radcliffe followed with a two baser, and a Philadelphia cheer was now heard. Bechtel was next, and he hit to the weak spot in the in field; but this time, Nelson, like his namesake at Trafalgar, did his duty. Result—two out and one run in, Radcliffe getting home. Pratt followed with a hot one to Swandell, who was equal to the emergency, Tommy stopped running, and the Athletics went to the field.

Now came the culminating point of the fight. E. Mills opened at the bat with a ball to right field, which was "Berry" well taken, and the Mutuals began to feel queer. Martin now came in to the rescue with a two baser, and as Charley Mills followed with a wicked one to right field and sent Martin home, the Mutuals not only heaved a sigh of relief because the score was a tie and defeat had been escaped, but they got up a rousing cheer by way of treat, and thus encouraged, Hatfield, Charley's substitute, made tracks for home and coming in on a passed ball won the game. The scene which followed is indescribable. The immense crowd of people rose en masse, yelling, shouting and cheering vociferously. Without further comment we append the score:—

The Athletics, in giving up the ball, did not also yield that "whip pennant" which they claim; in fact, nothing was said about it. If their claim was legal, the Mutuals are champions and there is no need of them playing again with the Atlantics.

MUTUAL vs. EXPERT.

The amateur Experts, of Philadelphia, visited New York on Friday and played a game with the Mutuals. They were to have played the Stars on Saturday, but an unwelcome fall of rain prevented fielding operations on that day. We append the score of their game with the Mutuals, which was quite a one sided affair. The Experts have a nine of young and promising players, who, although fair fielders, are very weak at the bat. Their uniforms, consisting of white shirts, tight blue pants reaching to the knee, with bright red stockings, is really startling. For six innings they failed to score a run, but a really brilliant hit of Ryan's finally broke the spell and they succeeded in getting four runs, the Mutuals in the meantime scoring twenty-nine. EAGLES, OF LOUISVILLE, vs. WHITE STOCKINGS, OF CHICAGO.

One of the finest games ever played in Louisville took place on Thursday, Sept. 8th, between the Eagles of that city and the White Stockings of Chicago. The playing was close and exciting during the entire game. The "Whites" say that Booth's pitching kept down their score, and expressed themselves satisfied with their treatment in the city. They also say that the Eagle is the finest amateur club they have yet played with. The score:—

SOUTHERN vs. WASHINGTON.

The most important game played in the Crescent City on Sunday, the 4th inst., was that between the above named clubs, on the Fair grounds, on the occasion of the pic-nic of the Gem Conclave, S. W. M. The play on the part of both clubs was excellent, but the ex-champions proved their superiority at the bat, taking the game by a score of 29 to 7 in seven innings, of which the following is the score:—

OLYMPIC vs. ATHLETIC.—On the 13th inst. the Olympics, of Washington, D. C., played the famed Athletics, of Philadelphia, Pa., on the grounds of the latter club at Philadelphia, which resulted in an easy victory for the Quaker City boys. The following is the score by innings, the crowded state of our columns forbidding a more extended notice:—

THE OLYMPIC CLUB, OF WASHINGTON, IN NEW YORK.

On Sunday night, Sept. 11th, the Olympic Club took cars from Washington for the metropolis, for the purpose of playing sundry return games due the Atlantic, Star and Mutual clubs, of Brooklyn and New York, and on Monday, Sept. 12th, they played the first of their games on the Capitoline grounds with the Atlantics, the result of which we gave in last week's CLIPPER. On the 13th they played their return game with the Mutuals on the Union grounds, and, though they were reinforced by the addition of Force, the Mutuals proved altogether too strong for them, and the result was their signal defeat, as will be seen by the appended score:—

Umpire—Mr. Chapman, of the Atlantic Club.

In the third inning Leech, the Olympic pitcher, being badly punished by the Mutuals, and taking umbrage at some comments on his pitching made by Ewell, refused to play, and so another player had to be put in to fill up the gap, Norton going in to make the pitcher's position "Strong"-er. The result of this change was that the Mutuals were obliged to remain content with an addition of but four runs to their score up to the eighth innings. The final result was the success of the New Yorkers, as above shown. Satisfied with the defeat, the Olympics left for home the same night, without playing their return match with the Stars, besides refusing to play the Excelsiors. The feature of the Olympic fielding in the above game was the play of Berthrong.

STAR vs. HARMONIC.

These Brooklyn clubs played their return game together on the Capitoline grounds Sept. 14th, and, as both clubs were strongly represented, a good contest was the result. The game opened with an equal score, but afterwards the Stars stepped in the van, and, though the Harmonics made a good rally in the 6th innings, the Stars led the score by 23 to 11 at the close of the 8th innings. By this time it had become too dark for further play, the game not having been commenced until after 4 P. M., and so the umpire "called" the game. The appended score gives all further particulars:—

RECEPTION OF THE WHITE STOCKINGS.

Some two or three thousand persons attended the reception game played by the White Stocking nine at Ogden's Park, Chicago, Ill., on the 10th inst. The picked nine was a strong team, but the White Stockings managed to dispose of them up to the end of the fifth innings, by a score of 15 to 1. In the sixth the Whites added 2 to their score, but the Picked got 7 runs through a series of fearful errors, principally made by Duffy, in short. The result of the game was, however, 35 to 11, as follows:—

THE JUNIOR JUDICIARY COMMITTEE MEETING.—The Judiciary Committee of the "National Association of Junior Base Ball Players" met on Thursday night, Sept. 8th, at 119th street and 3d avenue, this city, to consider charges against the Tuttle and Bailey Club, brought by the Montauk Club. The facts are these:—The Montauks charge the T. & B.'s with having played one Barlow in the silver ball game between the above clubs on Aug. 25th. They alleged that Barlow played in a match game of base ball with the Burnside Club against the Active Club, of Brooklyn (a non-convention club); the judiciary decided it not a match game; here the Silver Star score book was produced and it proved that Barlow had played in another game of ball with the Burnside against the Silver Stars (both convention clubs) on Aug. 4th. Wherefore the judiciary decided that Barlow had no right to play in the Tuttle and Bailey vs. Montauk match; declared said game null and void, and ordered a new game between said clubs for the silver ball on Thursday, 14th inst., on the Fly Away grounds, Hunter's Point. If the Tuttle and Bailey's won they were to turn the ball over to the Putnam Club, of Troy, who played a bona fide match with the Tuttle and Bailey's on the 5th inst.

JUNIOR BASE BALL ASSOCIATION.—The nominating committee of the N. A. of J. B. B. P. met at the rooms of the Hudson B. B. Club on the 16th inst., when the following clubs were admitted to membership in the association, on probation, viz.:—Pioneers, of Troy; Adelphic, of New York City; Cumberland, of Brooklyn; Resolute, of Troy; Active, of Brooklyn; Day and Halsey, of New York; Concord, of Brooklyn; Active, of Brooklyn; Pastime, of Brooklyn; Leisure, of Whitestone. CARD.—CHICAGO, Sept. 16th, 1870.—MR. FRANK QUEEN, EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—We, the Blue Stockings (colored), of Chicago, made application to play in the Amateurs' Tournament now in progress in this city, at Ogden, but were not admitted; for what reason I cannot tell, unless it is because they are afraid of us beating them. If they are afraid to play us why then do they put their names out as the champion amateur clubs of the city? Yours truly, W. P. JOHNSON, Secretary Blue Stocking B. B. C., 228 and 230 South Clark street.

CRICKET.

A GRAND MATCH AT HUDSON CITY, N. J.

YOUNG AMERICA vs. ST. GEORGE.

THE SIGNAL DEFEAT OF THE DRAGON SLAYERS.

On Wednesday, Sept. 14th, the members of the Young America Club, of Philadelphia, arrived in New York for the purpose of playing their return game with the St. George Club, the first game of the series having been played in Philadelphia last June, the result then being the success of the Young Americas, with six wickets to fall. Though this match promised to be the most interesting of the season, there were not a hundred spectators present, cricket having evidently lost its attraction in this vicinity, even for our English residents, though we noticed a few of the veterans of the Newark Club present.

The two clubs appeared on the field with strong elevens. The St. George Club presented a team strong in bowling and fielding, and with good batsmen to uphold their claim as the crack English club of America. The weather was just the thing for the match, but, owing to the drought, the ground was unusually hard and lively, and of course favorable for batting operations. Though the St. George eleven were not over confident, they nevertheless felt tolerably sanguine of making a stout resistance at least, and hoped for a better result than followed the last game. The Young Americas had privately concluded that the result of the meeting would of course be a victory for "our party," and the only doubt with them was as to how great their success would be.

By 11.45 A. M. on Thursday, the 15th, the preliminaries being arranged, the St. George eleven went to the field and Young America sent in W. Johns and Harry Newhall to the bowling of Norley and Carpenter. Careful play was the opening order, and so both the bowlers were credited with maiden overs, as each faced their opponents. A bye had been scored, when Johns popped up the first ball from Norley's second over, which fell into Bance's hands at point—first wicket for a single. John Large was his successor, and for nearly an hour he and Harry Newhall not only defended their stumps well, but both handled the willow with such effect that the score mounted up to the thirties, Harry being the largest contributor. Large had scored 8, marked by a three drive and a leg hit for 3, when he was neatly caught by Bance at point off Norley, the second wicket falling for 38, a rather high average. While they were in the bowling was changed, Butterfield going on at Carpenter's end, though Carpenter had not been punished to any extent. Bussier followed Large, and he opened play at the bat in lively style, two fine drives for 4 each being his two first hits. For three-quarters of an hour Bussier and Harry Newhall kept the sports between wind and to their work, and though the latter had a life given him at the wicket after scoring 30, and afterwards gave two chances for catches, only one fair opportunity was afforded to put him out in the whole of his innings, his batting being a masterly display against good bowling and very fine fielding. Bussier had credited himself with 36 when Norley—who had gone on with "slows" at his end—managed to take him bails, Bussier's fine score by nine of them by two fours, two threes and six twos, his wicket, the third, falling for the fine score of 96, a larger average than before. This looked promisingly for a remarkably large score, as some of the best bats of the Young America team had yet to go in. But now occurred one of those changes in the game which makes cricket so uncertain, the falling of the next four wickets reducing the average from 32 to a wicket down to a little over 17. Dan Newhall succeeded Bussier, and joined his brother Harry with the full intention of at least equaling Bussier's figures, but unluckily for Daniel's average, he had a duck egg instead, Dan returning a ball to Napier's hands—who had taken Butterfield's end in the bowling—the fourth wicket falling for 99. E. Carpenter was his successor, and another good stand was expected, especially as he opened play with two good drives for 4 each; but, after adding a single, Napier got in on his middle stump, and he gave place to Charley Newhall, the 5th wicket falling for 112. Charley was no more successful than Dan, and was similarly disposed of, as he returned a ball to Norley after standing an over or two, the result being an addition to the growing nest of duck eggs, Charley's wicked going down for 117. Pease was next, and he secured a single, and Harry Newhall's contribution had reached 38, when that important adjunct of a cricket match, "dinner," became the order of business, and play on the field was suspended for nearly an hour. After that Pease went to the wickets, returned a ball to Napier, and then went back to the club house to digest his food, his wicket, the 7th, falling for 121. Bobby Newhall now came in to redeem the error of his next of kin who had preceded him, and at once began to hit, the latter became the duty of the St. George fielders, Bobby cutting and driving the balls from both Napier and Norley, like an old campaigner, he astonishing Norley by driving him to the fence for 5, after cutting Napier handsomely for 4. Finally, after the score had been run up to 140, Harry Newhall was obliged to leave his younger brother, and as he returned from the wickets he was the recipient of loud applause from the present. Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Sept. 19, 1870.

AMONG the notable events of the past week the arrival of Nillson, the vocalist of some European fame, may be enumerated; and hoping to ensure a grand reception for the lady, the machinery by which the Jenny Lind furor was set in motion was brought into play, even to the styling of M'lle. Nilsson as the Swedish nightingale; but while the machinery of that enterprise was employed for the present occasion, the great furore which made the Lind speculation such an immense success—the strong arm that guided the entire movement—was wanting when Nillson appeared, and the latter lady will have to depend wholly upon her vocal abilities for success. Barnum had a strong card in the Lind, and he risked a fortune on her success before he had even as much as heard her sing a note; he ventured his money on her because fame had sounded her praises throughout Europe. He was successful beyond anticipation. Since then, others have attempted to follow in his footsteps, but they either lacked the nerve or the means to keep up the pace, and failure was the result. What the end of this last sensation may be is not easily foretold; if Nillson equal to the Lind, her manager may have a margin on the right side after paying all expenses; if her merits are below the standard of what sensational artists should be, somebody will be wofully stuck when settling day comes. And speaking of "Jenny with the soft brown hair," rumor has it that she contemplates another visit to America. We'll make pleasant rhymes about her, to wit:

THE GOLDSCHMIDT.

'Tis said that Madame Goldschmidt, once known as Jenny Lind,
Is so reduced in fortune that she, to raise the wind,
Is forced again to exercise her talent on the stage—
And, if she comes across the sea to our fair clime once more,
That, if she comes across the sea to our fair clime once more,
She will receive a welcome such as that she met before;
And nothing matters it to us where she shall first essay
To charm us with her song—though we were twenty miles away
We'd hasten there that we might list to melody so grand—
Yes, we would travel there on foot but what we'd be on hand.

.....A well meaning correspondent, after reading our little sketch of peculiar people at places of amusement, reminds us of several of them we made no mention; most prominent among them is "the man who walks in with books." Yes, we had forgotten him, but now we came to omit allusion to him we cannot tell, for certainly he is one of the most unmitigated nuisances that frequent the play house; he is a restless spirit, walking in the passage ways just at the moment when the audience is deeply interested in some thrilling part of the performance, and never ceasing until the scene is ended. The man who walks in with a cigar in his hat, or a few nights ago at one of our theatres, we were all deeply intent in listening to the conversation between two lovers—and you know how impressive such scenes are when well-enacted; even "the coughing man," and "the man who laughs," are quiet under such circumstances; but judge of our disgust to see "the man who walks" calmly rise from his seat and, with solemn, measured tread, stalk forth along the passage-way with noise like the tramp of many soldiers, while the people "sh-h-ed" without the slightest effect; he never ceases his walks until the love scene is ended, and then he only re-seats himself to be ready for a fresh start when another opportunity presents itself. But we will let these peculiar people alone for the present, for "every dog must have his day," whatever that has to do with it.....It is a good thing not to be in Paris just now. Gay and fascinating as that French metropolis may be under ordinary circumstances, but little can be said in its favor when the city is surrounded by a hostile foe and the inhabitants are reduced to short commons, while "the rocket's red glare, pausing hell on the sky"—as the sailor boy so fearfully expresses it in his unwelcome dream—"gives dreadful note of preparation," according to the allegation of Offenbach's Theatre, the Empire. Oh, Paris, Paris, here be now your jibes that were wont to set the world upon a roar, or words to that effect, probably. The theatres in Paris are all shut up, dead as a door nail, in a manner speaking—as the late lamented Mrs. Witherspoon used to say; the gay city is joyous no longer; doubt and despair sit upon each countenance, and for once amusements are forgotten. When we fit into our late revolution, the theatres were more prosperous than ever—people flocked to the play house to seek relief from the din of war; why, even our churches lost sight of the object of their peaceful mission, and their pastors preached death and destruction and war and desolation, until many of us who went to hear "the word" were obliged to leave the sanctuary and fill ourselves in the theatre with the flowing bowl. A few lines of poesy on the present state of affairs in Europe may not be objected to by our invaluable readers, as you shall hear, videlicit:—

SHUT UP FOR REPAIRS

'Tis said that since a horrid war has France and Prussia shaken,
The places of amusement have little profits taken;
One visiting a theatre sees not an audience gay
Crowding the tiers and galleries to gaze upon the play.
The melancholy visage of the manager must be—
And as the hall for all the house—most joyful know,

.....And talking about the theatre of war reminds us of a well meaning friend of ours, who labors under the insane impression that to him is delegated the happy faculty of imparting information on current topics to the ignorant and depraved. He undertook to explain the nature of the Metrailleuse to a "select circle of congenial spirits" the other evening, and this is how he did it—"You see," says he, "it is a big box concern, very much like a hand organ; you merely turn the crank and the shots fly out from one end of it just as fast as you can shovel them in at the other end." "Is that so?" asked "Our Jim," who was an attentive listener. "If it is, then all I have to say is that it's a mighty dangersome hand organ, and I wouldn't like to face the music." James has an odd way of expressing himself, as you may perceive.....And while on the subject of gospel truths and pastoral shepherds who watch their spiritual flocks, we want you to understand that all preachers are not given to wear a funereal cast of countenance at all times and under all circumstances, as many of them do, giving us frivolous, worldly sinners the idea that joining church absolves you evermore from any desire to smile or have a little fun. We went to experience meeting a short time ago to see how they were getting along, for we are no respecter of persons, but "the man who keeps the place" had such an awful experience to divulge that we hastily gathered up our things and fled like chaff before the wind, fearful of being contaminated should we longer remain in company with such desperadoes. But some pious people are really good, acting upon that wise precept to "do unto others as you would that they should do unto you," and they do not consider it a sin to laugh or tell a little story by way of illustration; they even go so far as to perpetrate a joke once in a great while. Last night we went to hear one of this class hold forth to "a large, select and appreciative audience." He was dressed in black clothes, and receives a salary of two thousand dollars; we honestly believe the man is to be pitied for his understanding. His discourse was of that kind which permits the preachers to ramble from one subject to another without regard to the conventional order of laying out a text. And among things alluded to, he said—"I have heard with sorrow, beloved brethren, that a member of this congregation, a man in good standing, the father of a large family and the husband of a devoted wife, made a bet on the recent boat race at Montreal, and, I am further afraid, he bet on the wrong side, my dear friends, which makes the sin the more heinous. Ah, my brethren, I warn you that you commit a sin when you do such a thing; for, if you bet on a boat race, or a prize fight, you become an aider and abetor in sin." You see that this great and good man could not let the occasion pass to wring in his little joke; we forgot them, unfortunately, but nevertheless, for we like a joke even if it does rub us a little; for what says Watts, the dead and gone rhymer and author of many hymns? Says he:—

And we believe that brother Watts had some value lying cyphered down to a nut shell.....Sometimes ministers lose their books and then in grief and tribulation in the pulpit they halt. We will illustrate this fact by a few tender lines, so that he who runs may read, always provided that he knows how; but to return to our muttons:—

THE PASTOR AND HIS FLOCK.

In a great storm, some time ago,
Upon a mountain steep,
As I beside my pastor was we knew,
Lost five successively sheep.
Quoth Jinks:—"I think if it was me
In the man's situation,
That total and harrowing would be
My bitter lamentation."

.....Some people look upon actresses as common property, to be used as they think proper, and to be insulted with impunity. Sometimes these sort of chaps wake up the wrong woman and get the conceit all taken out of them before they have had time to collect their shattered senses. It was only a few evenings since that a "young elter," while looking at the play, caught the eye of one of the actresses and took the liberty of winking at her. At the close of the performance the lady and a number of her friends laid for the chap, and, as he "emerged," the winked-at actress confronted him, and in the presence of the crowd lashed him until he yelped like a whipped cur, and sneaked off with his tail between his legs, figuratively speaking. And it served him right, for the man who shuts one eye at a woman, shuts both eyes to the respect due to her sex.....In purchasing tickets, of an evening, at the theatres, we were all, deeply intent in listening to the conversation between two lovers—and you know how impressive such scenes are when well-enacted; even "the coughing man," and "the man who laughs," are quiet under such circumstances; but judge of our disgust to see "the man who walks" calmly rise from his seat and, with solemn, measured tread, stalk forth along the passage-way with noise like the tramp of many soldiers, while the people "sh-h-ed" without the slightest effect; he never ceases his walks until the love scene is ended, and then he only re-seats himself to be ready for a fresh start when another opportunity presents itself. City Summary.

LOTTA, the vivacious, commenced a star engagement of six weeks duration at Niblo's Garden on Monday evening, Sept. 12th, and appeared in a drama, entitled "Heartsease," written for him petite artiste by Edmund Falconer, and then produced for the first time in this city. In a literary point of view it will never attain high rank, but yet may be regarded as a suitable vehicle to enable this young lady to show off her varied accomplishments. In the tracing of its plot it requires no great mental exercise, and it serves to enable one to pass a couple of hours pleasantly enough, at the expiration of which the mind is left untrammelled with any perplexities. It would be futile to attempt to apply the rules of criticism to Lotta's acting. She defies them all, and yet her performances are pleasing, and ever succeed in attracting audiences which sorely test the capacity of any theatre in which she may be playing. She has a childish face and form, a naturally artless manner, and she so speedily ingratiates herself into the heart affections of her audiences, that they cannot be displeased with her if they would. She fairly bubbles over with mirth, and the roguish, merry twinkle of her eye is sufficient of itself to banish a severe attack of desponde ncy. She executes her banjo solos, jig and clog dances, with so much zest and heartiness, and appears to so thoroughly enjoy them herself, that we feel inclined to fergive and forget the inartistic manner in which they are often forced upon our notice. The auditorium has been crowded during the past week. The play has been as well acted, perhaps, as such plays could be, and it has been adorned by some really fine new scenery from the pencil of the excellent artist attached to this establishment, Mr. Voegtlin.

THE FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE was opened for the season on Tuesday evening, Sept. 13th, with a comedy entitled "Man and Wife." Miss Clara Morris made her debut in this city as Annie Sylvester, and by her admirable acting of the character at once established herself a favorite. During the performance she was lavishly applauded and also summoned before the curtain.

LINA EDWIN'S ENGAGEMENT was opened on Sept. 12th, with a comedy in two acts, by Frederick Phillips, entitled "A Bird in the Hand is Worth Two in the Bush." It possesses but little merit and was, we think, an unfortunate selection, as it did not afford the company a fair opportunity to display their merits. The burlesque of "Black-Eyed Suzing" introduced Mr. Stuart Robson again to the New York public, in his very humorous impersonation of Captain Frostfire. Of the character he has an entirely original conception, which he elaborately delineates, and the success of the burlesque is in the main mainly owing entirely to the efforts of this comedian. It was originally produced in this city, at Wallack's Theatre, where it enjoyed an elaborate stage setting and a strong cast, but it proved a failure. Mr. Robson's make-up is very artistic. He makes the character of more than Falstaffian proportions, while his voice, which is ever pitched in a very high key, and is almost effeminate, proceeding from such a mountain of flesh, produces an effect which is extremely ludicrous. His action and bearing are in excellent keeping with the character. Miss Lina Edwin was most enthusiastically welcomed as she came upon the stage in the character of Susan, and what little that character required she performed in a quiet and attractive manner. Miss Emma Clive played William effectively, and sang the music with taste and judgment. She has an excellent singing voice, of good compass, strong and under good control. During the evening she was honored with several encores. Mr. Harry Josephs gave an admirable impersonation of Dame Hartley, which he costumed with appropriate taste. Charles T. Parsloe, Jr., gave a ludicrous impersonation of the High Admiral, and the other characters were fairly rendered. The auditorium presents a very cheerful appearance and the seats are comfortable, the added space being fully appreciated in all parts of the house. The company needs strengthening to a certain extent, and the ballet needs re-inforcements of pretty, shapely girls.

WALLACK'S THEATRE is announced to be opened for the regular season on Sept. 26th, with Sheridan's comedy of the "Rivals." In the meantime the theatre is to be thoroughly renovated and re-decorated, a new stage, combining all the latest improvements, laid, and a new act drop from the pencil of John Hilyard, Jr., will be unfurled upon the opening night. The following is a list of the stock company and attaches of the house:—Messrs. Lester Wallack, John Brougham, John Gilbert, Charles Fisher, George Clarke, Owen Marlowe, J. H. Stoddart, B. T. Ringgold, J. C. Williamson, Charles Rockwell, J. Lanergan, E. M. Holland, J. W. Leonard, J. Peck, J. Curran; misses M. Henriques, Effie Germon, E. Mestayer, Jennie Deland, Helen Tracy, Flora Clayton; Mmes. John Sefton, Thomas Barry and Misses Fowler, Hayden, Rowe and McCormick. Negotiations are pending with Mr. George Jordan, and he will probably be added to the company. Mr. Lester Wallack, proprietor and manager; John Gilbert, acting manager; Henry Schonberg, stage director; S. S. Wright, prompter; Theodore Moss, treasurer; Thomas Baker, leader of orchestra; H. Isherwood, George Evans and John Hillyard, Jr., scenic artists; Mr. Butler, master machinist; James Timoney, properties; Flanery and Benschoten, wardrobe. MLLE. CHRISTINE NILSSON arrived in this city Sept. 14th, and on the 16th was serenaded by the Swedish residents of New York at the residence of Dr. Doremus. Her first concert at Steinway Hall is announced for Sept. 19th.

AT WOOD'S MUSEUM Mrs. Scott-Siddons has appeared during the past week in "Twixt Axe and Crown," to the general satisfaction of the audiences which have there assembled. The play was acted more smoothly and the artists appeared easier in their parts. It was withdrawn after the evening performance of the 17th. During the present week this lady will appear as Rosalind in "As You Like It," a character better suited to her peculiar powers. At the afternoon performances the "Golden Butterfly," preceded by a farce, has attracted good audiences.

THE ENGAGEMENT OF MME. KATHI LANNER'S VIENNOISE BALLET TROUPE at the Grand Opera House is rapidly drawing to a close, the present week being announced as their last. They will continue to appear in the ballet of "Uriella, the Demon of the Night." A matinee will be given on Wednesday, the 21st, and the last performance will take place on Thursday, the 22d, when M'lle. Bertha Lind will take a farewell benefit. The theatre will be closed on Friday and on Saturday for rehearsal of the opera. At the conclusion of their engagement at this house the entire troupe will return to Europe. Great preparations are now being made at this theatre for the initial performances of the French Opera Bouffe Company which are announced to commence on the 26th, and we are assured that the management will spare no cost in properly mounting the operas. It is intended that the scenery and costumes shall surpass in richness and elaboration anything hitherto presented in this city.

MRS. JAMES A. OATES continues to appear nightly at the Olympic Theatre in "Little Faust," but the audiences of the past week have been limited in numbers. A change of bill is wanted.

SANDY SPENCER has obtained a lease of the property hitherto known as the New York Theatre, and, after certain improvements and alterations have been made, it is to be opened as a Variety Hall. The tower is now in process of demolition. Certain responsible parties have for some time been endeavoring to lease this property for a first class theatre without avail, and the probable reason of its being leased for its prospective purpose is that the owner of the property, A. T. Stewart, fears that Niblo's Garden, which his wife owns, would be injured if he permitted this to be occupied as a theatre. Mr. Josh Hart, it is said, will be connected with the management.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, is prepared to engage a new company for the Academy of Music, Omaha, Neb., and to treat with stars for the same house. Oliver Doud Byron, Carleton, Irish comedian, and several other artists can be engaged through him. He is also agent for the Grand English Opera Combination, &c. For further particulars read his advertisements.

JOHN MURRAY, a good comedian, has appeared during the past week at the Bowery Theatre in a nightly change of bill to very good business. For the present week a new and original drama, from the pen of J. McClosky, entitled "Rory of the Hills; or, Dhom Dhu," is announced to be played, in conjunction with other dramas.

FANNY JANAUSCHEK will commence a season of twelve nights and two matinees at the Academy of Music on Oct. 10th. She has been engaged for one year to perform in the United States under the management of Augustin Daly.

BURNELL RUNNELLS AND SONS have arrived in this city from Paris, France, where they have been performing at the Comique and Imperatrice. They bring with them several new features.

THOMAS E. HIND has been engaged for the Varieties Theatre, N. O., by Manager J. L. Baker for the coming season.

MLLES. CELESTINE, CLARA AND BLANCHE GOTTSCHALK have arrived in this city from Paris, France, and will shortly appear in concert at Association Hall. The two former are pianists and the latter a vocalist.

THE "BABIES OF THE PERIOD" has served to fill the auditorium of Kelly and Leon's new minstrel hall nightly, and will consequently occupy a prominent part of the evening's entertainment for some time to come. Master Mark Smith makes his first appearance here on the 19th in the act called "Josephus Orange Blossom."

CHARLEY WHITE, the veteran negro comedian, is announced to make his re-appearance at the Theatre Comique, after a lengthened absence from the boards, this evening, the 19th inst., in his original character of Thomas in the farce of "Domestic Difficulties." Miss Emma Grattan, who was enthusiastically received in her burlesque songs during the past week, will remain. M'lle Giovanni Manzeri will appear in a beautiful fairy ballet, entitled "The Forest Rose." Mr. John C. Franklin will make his first appearance here as the harlequin in the pantomime of "Nick Nack," in which Charley Abbott continues to delight the audience. During the past week the business has been excellent, and on Saturday night some three hundred people were unable to secure admission.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS, with their famous quartet of Ethiopian stars, Birch, Wambold, Bernard and Backus, continue to attract large audiences at their hall, 585 Broadway.

HARRY CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 636 Broadway, inserts his card in another column.

CHARLES T. PARSLOE is lying at the point of death in this city.

JOSH HART, it is alleged, has commenced a suit against Dan Bryant for breach of contract, putting damages at $50,000. It is claimed that while Mr. Hart was managing the Tammany, he and Mr. Bryant came together with a view to mutual interest. It was then agreed, after several meetings, that during the coming season [illegible] should yield it to Mr. Hart. That the latter should be sole responsible manager, and that Bryant should appoint the treasurer; that Hart should have the use of all the wardrobe and scenery in the hall. That Bryant should give up all pretensions to using his name in connection with any business in this city during the term of the contract, and that finally at the end of each week Bryant should receive two-thirds of the profits, Hart one-third, and that in addition the latter should receive a salary of $100 per week for his services. This contract was signed and sealed in the presence of witnesses a few days after signing the contract Mr. Bryant secured a nullification of his lease from the Tammany Society, and Mr. Hart and others endeavored to lease it, but failed, the society having voted to retain it as a committee room. The first move will probably be an injunction on the new hall in Twenty-third street being called Bryant's, as that name, it was agreed, should not be used, except by Mr. Hart. On Mr. Bryant's return to the city the suit is to be called up, we are informed.

MESSRS. LOWELL AND SIMMONDS, dramatic agents of 609 Broadway, announce that William Arlington, the Ethiopian comedian, can be engaged through them; also Burnell Runnells and sons are prepared to negotiate star engagements for the Coates Opera House, Kansas. An important notice to the ladies and gentlemen engaged at this theatre will be found in our advertising columns. Early in October these gentlemen play Maggie Mitchell, J. K. Emmett and the Lydia Thompson Troupe in their New England circuit, and to-day, the 19th, they closed an engagement to play Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams in the principal New England cities.

AT TONY PASTOR'S, during the past week, the business has been excellent, and very strong attractions are announced for the present week, first among which may be enumerated the Romelli Family of gymnasts, consisting of the following artists:—Miles. Marie and Cecile Romelli and Signor Eugene Romelli, who will appear in an aerial feat invented by them entitled "Berceuse de Fer, or Life and Death." Mr. George Murray, a Dutch comedian and vocalist, will make his first appearance; Tony Pastor will sing several new songs and the old favorites, Wild, Kerns, Seymour and Cummings, will appear in new acts, and the performance will conclude with a new local drama written expressly for this house by John F. Poole—who, by the way, has resumed the position of acting manager—entitled "White Slaves, or the Saleswomen of New York."

A GRAND CONCERT for the benefit of wounded soldiers of the French army is announced to take place at the Academy of Music on Sept. 20th, with the following artists:—Mme. Gazzaniga, Mme. Viardi-Maru, Mme. Guzman, Mlle. Loucie Groux; Mesdames Albites, Guzman, Grand, Butler, Nicolas, and Messrs. Lefranc, Petrelli, Bascelli, Bustrago and Giorza. MME. MARIE SHERACH, with her suite and dramatic company, arrived on the 17th in the steamer Iowa from Europe. Her performances at the Fourteenth Street Theatre will probably commence on the 22d.

Dramatic.

CINCINNATI INTELLIGENCE is furnished as follows by our correspondent, dated Sept. 16th:—"After a successful opening week at Wood's Theatre by the stock company, the star season was inaugurated on Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Florence, whose initial programme was 'Handy Andy,' 'Mischievous Annie' and the 'Returned Volunteer.' Mr. Florence appearing in all three pieces and Mrs. Florence in the second. The same bill was repeated on Tuesday, and on the next two evenings 'Born to Good Luck,' 'The Young Actress' and 'Bumpology' were given. On the 15th Mrs. Florence was taken ill and could not appear. For to-morrow's matinee the 'Ticket of Leave Man' is to be the attraction, and 'Ireland As It Was' in the evening. The houses during the week have been uniformly good, notwithstanding the piays are nearly all old stand-bys, and the Irish boy and Yankee girl seem as popular as ever with their many admirers. The pieces have not been of a character to develop the talent of the stock company. The Florences are to remain another week, producing 'Kathleen Mavourneen' on the 19th....."

Mozart Hall is to be occupied for a brief season, commencing on the 19th, by the Beckett British Blondes, who open in 'Luna.' Its large stage and excellent scenery adapt the hall very well for theatrical purposes, and it is rented for the present engagement by R. E. J. Miles, who will also bring out other combinations in the same place at different times during the season."

THE NEW COMPANY engaged by manager Lanergan for the Opera House, Detroit, Mich., is composed of the following artists:—Charles Haverley, J. B. Fuller, J. A. Kay, H. Browne, Wm. F. Owen, Spencer Pritchard, W. C. Pope, J. W. Hague, H. Barraclough, H. A. Lampe, J. Lewis, Frank E. Lane, T. F. Simmons, D. A. Payne, Jas. Taylor, Lizzie Anderson, Mary Davenport, Emma Whittle, Jennie Johnson, Mrs. E. Barraclough, Mary Lane, Jennie Price and Fannie Marden. The orchestra will be a full and efficient one, under the direction of Prof. Wm. Bendix; Charles A. Wing, business manager. The opening performance will be given on Monday, Sept. 19th, on which occasion the Fox and Dexter Troupe will appear and continue for one week. Engagements have been effected with the principal combinations and stars, who will appear during the season. So writes our correspondent, "Frank."

JOHN E. OWENS is announced to appear at the Opera House, Paterson, N. J., this evening, Sept. 19th.

THE DRAMATIC SCHOOL OF THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Cleveland, O., was inaugurated on Sept. 17th by the performance of the "Lancashire Lass" and "Betsey Baker." Mrs. D. P. Bowers and J. C. McCullom were announced to commence a star engagement on Sept. 19th.

DR. O. H. HESS was married in Chicago, Ill., on Sept. 11th, by the Rev. Arthur Mitchell, to Miss Clara A. Buttolph, of that city. Mr. Hess will be the advance agent of the Grand English Opera Combination.

AT THE VARIABLE OPERA HOUSE, Albany, N. Y., writes our correspondent, "Beppo," Oliver D. Byron has appeared during the week ending the 17th in a new drama written by J. McCloskey, entitled "Across the Continent," which has been finely mounted and has achieved success. Mr. Byron's impersonation of Ferret being artistic and scholarly. Walter Keeble played John Adderly in a masterly manner, and Harry Clifford, as Knuckle Bone Johnny, shared honors with the star. All the other characters were well performed. On Monday, the 19th, Little Nell is announced to commence a brief star engagement and will appear in an original play written for her by F. G. Maeder, entitled "Katy Did." It is now definitely settled that Mr. Frank Lawlor will open the Academy of Music in this city about the first of October. Many alterations have been made under the supervision of John Mahan, the stage carpenter.

THE "HISTRIONIC CONGRESS OF ARTISTS," who performed at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, on Sept. 16th and 17th, under the management of Leonard Grover, and were announced to appear at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, for six nights, commencing Monday, Sept. 19th, have come to grief. The receipts of the two performances amounted to about sixteen hundred dollars, but of this amount not one cent have the artists received. Mr. E. L. Davenport, who had the manager's promise in writing to pay him three nights salary on the Saturday evening, was unable to collect it. At the conclusion of the performance an Internal Revenue officer presented himself at the dressing rooms in which, at that moment, were Messrs. E. L. Davenport, John E. Owens, Mark Smith, Frank Mayo and W. R. Floyd in various stages of deshabille, and demanded the payment of the two per cent. tax on the gross receipts and summarily took possession of the wardrobes of the above mentioned gentlemen. This proceeding fell like a bomb in an enemy's camp, and for a moment a tableau of consternation, more natural than ever presented upon the stage, was held. After a short parley the Internal Revenue officer agreed to accept the personal security of Mr. E. L. Davenport, whom he said was the "only gentleman in the crowd." Whereupon one of the other luminaries, making an ejaculation of surprise, the officer cautiously appended the words, "that I know," which changed the aspect of affairs very materially. Mr. Davenport gave his promise in writing to pay the amount in the event of Mr. Grover failing so to do, the wardrobes of the gentlemen were released, and they made a speedy retreat for New York. During Sunday a convocation of the artists engaged to leave that night for Philadelphia, among whom were Messrs. E. L. Davenport, Frank Mayo, F. C. Bangs, Charles Morton and others, might have been seen at the Metropolitan Hotel awaiting the arrival of the manager with the funds to purchase tickets, pay hotel bills and other necessary expenses for transporting them to the city of Brotherly Love. He came not, however; the artists are all here, and will remain, so there cannot be a performance in Philadelphia as announced, although a considerable number of seats had been sold, we are informed. These professional gentlemen are very bitter in their denunciation of the conduct of Mr. Hart, which will, probably, develope itself in some palpable form at no distant day. Since writing the above we have been informed that the artists announced to appear in Philadelphia have determined to play there on their own account and under their own management, commencing on Wednesday evening, the 21st inst., when, it is to be hoped, they will prove successful.

COPIES OF "MAN AND WIFE," with the right of production in the United States, can be purchased of W. H. Bowditch, the special agent of all Mr. Augustin Daly's plays. His address will be found in our advertising columns.

Murdoch and T. C. Howard performed the "Colleen Bawn" and "John Wopps" at Lynn, Mass., on Sept. 15th.

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL, it will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, has a few weeks of her starring time yet unfilled. For her new play, "Jargtine," she has had several new and elegant cuts, of novel designs, prepared. Manager Harris and Mr. Hanley's (her agent) address in another column.

MINNIE GRAY'S COMEDY COMBINATION will open its season at Corinthian, N. Y., on Sept. 26th. The company is as follows:—Misses Minnie Gray, Marian A. Page, Mary T. Thompson, Laura Deland, Messrs. Willis H. Page, W. Henderson, G. Mitchell, H. W. Churchill, P. Rutledge, H. Ogden, W. Morrison, G. W. Henderson, J. C. Benzinger, H. Baller, Albert Keener, and George Gray. Miss Gray will perform a new comedy entitled "Cie-Cie," for which she has purchased the right for the United States, excepting the cities of Boston, Chicago and New York.

DR. PAUL CAMPBELL is desirous of joining in partnership with some manager who is already established, and proposes to carry capital to carry on the business. Full particulars are set forth in his advertisement in another column.

FOX'S AMERICAN THEATRE, Philadelphia, is crowded nightly with large audiences. With an ever-varying programme, they insure the frequently repeated presence of their friends, and, of course, every stranger who visits the city makes it a point to drop in at the American circus during his stay. The Ritarellis appeared last week in their wonderful act on the flying trapeze, their performances being marked by rare neatness and dexterity, while the apparent facility with which they execute some of their most astounding gymnastic evolutions adds considerably to the pleasure one experiences in witnessing their exploits. The Ritarellis are in the second week of their engagement. The blondes still continue a successful engagement, and the Can-can, as nightly given by these artists, is of the gayest character. James W. Wesley and Master Martin put in a re-appearance last week, and are favorably received every evening in their pantomimic eccentricities. John Pendy has made a hit in his patter songs, and appears in a song and dance, " have been reduced to 10 cents all over the house, and 25 cents for reserved seats. The show is good and popular, and may yet succeed, though it has met with serious reverses.....The Academy of Music is doing a rushing business. From present indications it will carry the days prosperously, and at present the company is the most complete and talented I have seen in Richmond since ante bellum days. Next Monday, a new company will put in an appearance, and the managers are negotiating for the appearance of first class performers. In truth they deserve support. They are giving a good show and the people give them a good attendance. Jake Budd is the stage manager. In addition to the company named in my last, Harry Clark and Gracie Clark, trapeze performers, have appeared; also Miss Estelle Hyanis, singer. The latter's appearance was the first in five years. She is pretty, dresses elegantly and sings very well. Her reception was a warm one and she soon turned the heads of our young men. Very lady-like and reserved in her demeanor, she at once became a great favorite, and her singing slightly is received with shouts of applause and repeated encores. Her voice is a contralto; her notes and words are very distinct, and she never stumbles in the execution of notes in the topmost register. Julia May and Christie Morel are to appear next Monday. So writes our correspondent "J. R. P."

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Pittsburgh, Pa., opened on the 12th inst., for the fall and winter season, to a large, fashionable and appreciative audience. The interior of the house presented a very attractive and cosy appearance, and the performance gave general satisfaction. The first part of the entertainment was of an olio character, and nearly all of the acts were cordially applauded. Larry Tooley received a warm welcome from the audience, and his Teutonic songs and dances were repeatedly encored. Wm. Carleton's Irish songs were well received, as also were the Swiss bell solos by Julian Brehan. Prince Sadi D' Jalma, the "man without bones," accomplished wonders, and those who admire this kind of performance were highly pleased. Agnes Sutherland was kindly received, and she sang very well. Dick Ralph's songs and dances, although a little too exuberant, were so heartily appreciated that he was obliged to respond to five or six encores. Charley Benedict's performance was satisfactory to those in the gallerips. The burlesque of 'Bad Dickey" concluded the entertainments, Mr. M. W. Fiske playing the Duke of Glester and Miss Marion Fiske Henri. Both characters were capitally rendered, and during the progress of the piece Mr. and Miss Fiske were the recipients of considerable applause. Miss Jennie Burnell, as Princess Elizabeth; Miss Kate Brevoort, as Lady Annie, and Mr. Waddleton, as Lord Stanley, were good. The orchestra at this place is a very fine one, and is under the leadership of Louis Gumpert. The attendance has continued large all the week. A family matinee will be given every Saturday. Thus writes our correspondent on Sept. 16th.

FOLEY AND LESTER, song and dance men, and M'lles Obert iand Brenetti, danseuses, made their debut at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 12th inst. Foley and Lester do a good song and dance, and as comedians they are tolerable. Obert and Brunetti dance cleverly are pretty, and dress bewitchingly. The execution by them of the French Can-can is vociferously applauded. Ned Buckley and Ida Buckley left for California last week. Business has been exceedingly good at this house during the week. Lizzie Lagrange will be one of the new faces this week.

AT THE FROST STREET THEATRE COMIQUE, Baltimore Md., business still remains in a highly flourishing condition. On the 12th inst., the pantomime of "Jack and the Beanstalk" was presented for the first time in our city. It was greeted by a very full audience, and there has been no diminution up to date. The Foster Family—Hernandez, Frank and Nellie—assume the parts of Clown, Harlequin and Columbine, and B. S. Hodges the part of Pantaloon. Miss Lizzie A. Kelsey appears as the Fairy of the Beanstalk, Walter Benn as the Giant, and Miss Sallie Apt as the Giant's wife. The stage tricks are very ludicrous and diverting, and the mechanical contrivances and change display remarkable ingenuity. The final transformation scene, by Getz, and entitled the "Border of Delicious Delights," is truly a magnificent production. The olio entertainment remains the same as stated in my last report.....At Raiber's Odeon, in the same city, business continues lively and lager flows freely. The major has competent lieutenants who see that the best of order and discipline is preserved. Herr Sorrinski and Miss Krous on each evening are favorably received in their character delineations and songs. The bright particular star of the evening, however, is Miss Maggie Bowers, so well known to the concert halls throughout the country as a vocalist. Her voice retains all of its earlier strength and sweetness. Her selections are tasty, and their rendition invariably encored. The major states his intention to early introduce an entirely new and attractive troupe. So writes our correspondent, "Don Juan."

CORINELLI'S EXPOSITION, recently organized, will start on a tour of the Canadas and Western states on Sept. 26th. A meeting of the artists engaged and some wants are set forth in our advertising columns.

MURRAY LAUGHLIN AND GEORGE F. MOORE, song and dance men, were the fresh faces at Wray's Theatre Comique, Rochester, N. Y., during the week ending Sept. 17th.

TALENT is wanted for the Winter Garden Theatre, Chicago. Apply as per advertisement.

OF THE VARIETY HALLS in Indianapolis, Ind., our correspondent, writing under date of Sept. 15th says:—"At the Metropolitan, under the management of H. J. Sargent, the business since the opening has been very good, that of the present week being largely on the increase, and it is now firmly established as a first class variety theatre, and patronized by the best ladies and gentlemen of the city. The Barlow Brothers have made a big hit in their clog dancing. Miss Augusta Lamereaux is very good in her Lingard changes. Belle Graham sings fairly. J. S. Berry, in an act called telegraphic changes, makes some rapid changes of costume, and his singing is fair. Fred. McAvoy has made a big hit in singing the 'Green Little Shamrock,' and the performance has concluded with Mr. J. S. Berry's local burlesque on the 'Black Crook,' which is very funny.....At the Exchange Theatre, under Dan Shelby's management, business continues fair. This place has a bar and wine room attached to it. J. L. Davis and his troupe of trained dogs are the principal attractions, and are very clever. Belle Leon sings fairly, and Malinda Nagle executes a jig very cleverly."

LIZZIE BENEDICT AND MASTER GEORGE GARLAND were the fresh faces that appeared at the Tammany Hall, Bay City, Mich., during the week ending Sept. 17th.

CHARLEY SHAY'S MONSTER QUINQUILLION EXPOSITION is billed to appear at Mystic Bridge, Conn., Sept. 19th; Westerley, 20th; Providence, R. I., 21st; Bristol, 22d; Newport, 24th.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Nashville, Tenn., the business has been good since the opening. Johnny Murphy and Louise Murphy, the "Champion Female Bone Soloist," are the fresh attractions.

A. SPEARE, comic, and Johnnie Sturt, song and dance; Miss E. Burns, vocalist; Ada Stewart, jig dancer, and Agnes Farland, clog dancer, were the fresh attractions that appeared at Marsdorf's Varieties, Reading, Pa., during the week ending Sept. 17th.

JOHNNIE MCKAY and his troupe of Roya Marionettes advertises that he can be engaged for variety halls or to travel.

OF AMUSEMENTS in MEMPHIS, TENN., our correspondent, writing Sept. 13th, says:—"The Gaiete Comique group of specialties made a successful debut on the 12th at the Memphis Theatre to a fine audience. The performers were Walter Bray, Carter, Jennie Engel, Annie Gibbons, the Leopolds, the Punch and Judy Show, Gardener and Kennedy. They were to leave there for the Crescent City on the 17th. Contrary to any expectations the 10th music halls have kept open during the entire summer. They are now in full blast; Broom's Opera House being in the best location, having the newest house and by far the best scenery, is doing the finest business. The 10th was the occasion of the benefit of Mrs. Charles Broom, when the house was packed. Ben Wheeler is a fair comedian and an excellent singer. Master Semmie is good—he is of the Lingard school—and Miss Lula Callum, a singer, has been added to the company.....At the Varieties Theatre things are prosperous. The blondes, Miss Nelly and Lou Georgia are favorites. Johnny Pierce, Geo. Melville and Charles P. White make their acts lively by their vim and humor. The Torrenzbros. are established firmly in the favor of the frequenters. Fred. Shaw has joined the company, and Johnny Pierce will leave for the Academy of Music, N. O., on the 18th."

FROM CINCINNATI we have the following intelligence from our correspondence up to the 16th:—"The Alhambra is once more undergoing a change, the stage being placed at the end nearest the street this time, and the audience thus facing toward the entrance. The building is both higher and wider in the rear, and this allows the erection of a gallery. The improvement, which is a real one, will be completed in a day or two. The performances may possibly be interrupted for to-night, but no longer. Frank Thompson, comic and sentimental vocalist; Master O'Brien, a youthful comedian, and Neal Conway, a fine cloggist and Ethiopian performer, have joined this week. Conway has made a decided hit, throwing somersaults in his dances, and otherwise displaying his agility. Annie Florence, the jiggist, who has just arrived from Nashville, opens on the 17th. Business has greatly improved.....There has been no change in the company at the Race Street Theatre, business having been good enough without. A new thing on the programme this week, has been the venerable operetta of 'Oh Hush," with Celia Ifert, Johnny Weaver, Hen Mason and Frank Bennett in the different parts. This, with the perennial Can-Can, makes a large part of the programme. Maud De Lisle, Minnie Baker, Addie Sprague, Belle Ifford, and Lotta May fill up the rest with their songs and dances. Miss Minnie Coleman is 'underlined.....Business at the Academy of Music is very good. Harry Wilkinson, comedian, and Master Sammy—an infant song and dancist—appeared this week. S. D. Persse is now the business agent, and Nellie Anderson is the bright, particular star.....John and Maggie Fielding are to open at the Alhambra on the 26th.

ANNIE HINDLE, Blanche De Vere, Little Vic and Jennie Smith were the new attractions at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., Sept. 12th, and they, in addition to the other members of the company, have attracted crowded houses every night since. Annie Hindle, in her male character songs and changes, took the boys by storm. In the parlor scene, called "Love and Jealousy," she and Blanche De Vere give a very finished piece of acting. Little Vic, in her songs and changes, is something wonderful for a child of seven years, and in the "Sunflower Duet" between her and Jennie Smith, who is a fine dancer and vocalist, she does splendidly. Tommy Jefferson, in his character of the Doctor in the comic act called "The Smugglers," is perfectly side splitting. Cincinnatus, in his song and dance, has become a great favorite, as he well deserves to be. Sallie Mason does the excelsior jig well, as she does everything she undertakes. The performance concludes with the nautical drama called "War in China. Ella La Rue, the female banjoist, is announced to introduce her Grecian and Roman statues on the 19th inst., at which date Pete Lee also puts in an appearance.

BUSINESS AT WARREN'S DRAMA HOUSE, Buffalo, N. Y., continues good. The public are fast learning that this theatre has no lack of first class performers and that it is conducted precisely in the manner which the manager announced it should be, viz., amusing without vulgarity. An entire change of programme was made on the 19th, together with the addition of the "African Dwarf," who is received with roars of laughter. Cool Burgess' "Ten Minutes of Fun" excites the risibles of the most demure; Gus Williams' changes are highly appreciated and "The Dutch Sandgre" is very amusing. The Lawrence Troupe (statuary); Harry Fox, banjoist; Billy Allen and Lucy Adams, vocalists, are the current stars, openingon the 19th.....Business at Wild's Varieties continues good. No new faces have appeared lately, but the present company are very popular. The can-can has passed its one hundred and fiftieth night and is received with as much favor as ever.

For the present week an entire change of programme will be offered. W. Henry Rice will appear in a new sketch entitled "Ellison's Arrival." W. Barry, song and dance, and Johnny Harris, a representative of the old Virginia darkey, will appear.

HARRY MCCARTY'S EXCELSIOR MINSTRELS started out from Indianapolis on Sept. 14th for a tour of the southern states. The troupe is organized as follows:—Harry McCarthy, the Arkansas comedian; Sam Gardner, basso and interlocutor; C. Lindsey Davis and Ned Turner, end men; Johnny Stout, balladist; Geo. A. Wilcox, elocutionist; Sullivan and Macklin, song and dance; Harry Barry, John Burgess, Gus Gebert, John Boettger and Prof. Miller. They performed in Evansville, Sept. 13th and 14th; Mount Vernon, 17th, and are billed to appear at Paducah, Ky., 19th and 20th; Jackson, Tenn., 21st and 22d, and Corinth, Miss., 23d.

M'ME RENTZ'S Female Minstrels will shortly start on a tour of the New England States, under the management of Rufus Somerby. C. Amory Bruce will be the advance agent.

WM. B. EVERETT, bone soloist, can be addressed care of this office.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS are billed to appear at De Gewe's Opera House, Atlanta, Ga., on Sept. 20th, 21st and 22d.

DAN BRYANT'S MINSTRELS are billed to appear at the Harrington Opera House, Providence, R. I., on Sept. 19th and 20th.

JOHNNY ALLEN'S MINSTRELS appeared in Becket Hall, Dayton, O., Sept. 13th and 14th.

MORRIS BROTHERS' MINSTRELS performed at City Hall, Portland, Me., on Sept. 16th and 17th.

ARTISTS of ability can secure good engagements by addressing Simmons and Slocum, as per advertisement.

UNSWORTH AND EUGENE will appear this evening, Sept. 19th, and during the week, at Hooley's Opera House, Brooklyn, L. I., in addition to the large corps of talented performers now engaged at this popular resort, among the foremost of which will be found:—Billy Rice, Billy Sheppard, Johnson and Powers, J. K. Campbell, and G. W. H. Griffin. Business has been excellent at this establishment since the commencement of the present season. Mr. R. M. Hooley, during eight years of management in that city, has learned the wants and tastes of his patrons, and well knows how to cater for them in a satisfactory manner.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS are attracting large audiences nightly to their handsomely fitted up Arch Street Opera House, Philadelphia. Lew Simmons took John Hart's place on the end in the first part last week, and the change gave general satisfaction to the patrons of this establishment, with whom Lew Simmons is a great favorite. The songs and choruses in the first part are in the hands of able artists, both vocal and instrumental, and the comic acts in the olio continue as usual to elicit much mirth. Master Barney put in an appearance last week, and was warmly applauded in his Dutch impersonations and in a jig dance. Lew Simmons did a good banjo solo in the second part. John Hart confirmed the favorable impression he had already created by his comic performances in "The Last of the Mohegans," and "The Coopers." A new and attractive programme will be presented this week, including the comic acts of "The Intelligence Office" and "The Other Fellow." Acting on the suggestion we made a week or two since, the managers have stationed officers in the galleries, who keep the gods in good order, and not the slightest noise is to be heard now while the entertainment is going on.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS, Philadelphia, are nightly visited by well-pleased audiences. The programme for the week was a very attractive one. In the opening part Mr. J. L. Carncross sang two ballads with great taste and was rapturously applauded. Frank Moran and E. F. Dixey, on the ends, are very droll and amusing. In the second part Bobby Newcomb, in his new song and dance, "Girl with the Curl," was greeted with great applause and made the hit of the evening. Ed. Banker, formerly of Fox's, made his first appearance on the 12th inst., under the assumed name of Burton, and played the character of Theophilus Hopjohn in the "Two Dromios," a laughable burlesque, which was nightly hailed with screams of laughter. The performances concluded with the amusing extravaganza of "The Two Dromios." This week an entire change of programme is announced, among which are burlesques entitled "Fernande," and an entirely new and appropriate one of "The Storming of Sedan."

JOHNNY ALLEN'S MINSTRELS opened at Mozart Hall, Cincinnati, O., for three nights and a matinee, commencing Thursday, Sept. 14th. Our correspondent says:—The company is a pretty strong one, and has drawn very fair houses. Like the Skiff and Gaylord party, they have four end men, viz.:—Johnny Allen, George Edwards, Andy Carland and Morrissey Little. Besides these, Fred Emerson sings comic songs, and Harry Lane does Lingard acts, so that the comedian department of the troupe is unusually strong. The unwonted luxury of four end men answers well enough for a change, but would hardly do for a steady diet, as it crowds things too much. P. O. Saxton and Frank Girard are the balladists of the company. Johnny Allen, in his specialties, is warmly received. A burlesque opera on "Faust" constitutes the wind-up, and the large stage and fine scenery of the hall enable the company to give it in splendid style. All in all they give a pleasant entertainment.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT closed their performances in the state of California at Vallejo on Sept. 10th, and they left on the 11th for Nevada territory, where they will tarry at Virginia City to give three performances, and then return east by the way of Kansas City, Hannibal, Springfield, Terre Haute, Indianapolis, Louisville, Lexington, Dayton, Columbus, Zanesville, Johnstown, Pa., and Harrisburg; from thence to Philadelphia, where they will commence their regular season at the Seventh Street opera House.

Mr. Day made some fitting remarks.

Amateur.

THE SHAKESPEARE ASSOCIATION, of Philadelphia, on Sept. 8th, presented "Meg's Diversion" and "Nan, the Good for Nothing." Mr. E. Bartram as Old Crow was excellent. Mr. J. Estlin as Jaspar seemed out of his element. Miss L. Hughes as Meg played well. Miss Sallie Allen as Cornelia was very good, fully sharing the honors of the evening with Meg. In the farce Miss Nelly Winters as Nan surprised every one by her natural rendition of this part. This lady evidently has talent of no common order. Nothing else (except "Robert Macaire" and "Raising the Wind") will be performed.

THE WHEATLEY DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION commenced their fall performances on Sept. 6th, at their hall in Philadelphia, Pa., when the comedy of the "Rivals" was presented. During the recess an improvement has been made in the hall by raising the seats at the back part thereof, and now all the audience are enabled to see the stage to advantage. They have a fine orchestra, of which Mr. Cobbin is the leader, and they have effected an arrangement with a costumer, so that all the pieces presented by them may be properly dressed.

THE WHEATLEY DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION, of Philadelphia, gave its second performance for the season of 1870-71 on Wednesday night, 14th inst. Mr. H. Hayhurst, long and favorably known from his connection with amateur theatricals in that city, had the selection of pieces for the programme, it being his night, and, choosing the comedy of "Still Waters Run Deep," afforded the large audience present an opportunity of judging of his versatility and culture by a very quiet and graceful personation of the role of John Mildmay. The drama of "Robert Macaire" concluded the rather lengthy performance. Mr. J. K. Wilson as Robert Macaire, Mr. E. E. Huifish, Jr., as Jacques Strop, and Mr. John J. Rogers as Germuel, were all excellent. The Wheatley is now in a most flourishing condition, possessing a handsomely fitted up little theatre, and the performances every Wednesday evening attract fashionable audiences.

A COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT was tendered to Messrs. A. Redifer and C. E. Rolling, at the Amateurs' Drawing Room in 17th street, near Chestnut, Philadelphia, on the 14th, when "East Lynne; or, the Elopement," was presented, with a strong cast of amateurs.

THE BOOTHENIAN DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION have commenced their regular weekly entertainments in Philadelphia.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

OF LONDON, ENG., THEATRICALS and other amusements, our advices are up to Sept. 4th. Shelley shall be plaintiff and the said C. H. Rose shall be defendant; and the question to be tried shall be whether the said A. C. Shelley is part author of the drama "Clan." And I further order that such issue shall be prepared by the plaintiff therein within ten days from this date, and be returned by the defendant therein within seven days, and shall be tried in Middlesex. And I reserve all other questions."

MISS KATE PERCY, the statuesque artiste, who left New York for London on the 6th ult., started out from the latter city on Aug. 20th under a two years' engagement. Miss Percy sailed up the Mediterranean, where she will probably appear in the Ionian islands, and will afterwards proceed to Egypt, Malta and Australia. If success and health will admit, returns to America at the end of the two years.

OF AUSTRALIAN THEATRICALS we have information up to June 18th. Mrs. Bandmann Palmer appeared at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, in co-operation with her husband, and had been pronounced an excellent and patus-taking actress..... Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews had been playing with success at Victoria and Ballarat..... The Haymarket Theatre in Melbourne had been opened spasmodically during portions of the month, and a succession of failures had been the result..... The Princess' closed about June 11th, Miss Rose Evans having completed with light vaudevilles, which usually render the programme here so attractive.

MR. BOWMAN, supported by Mr. Sefton's company, appeared Sept. 3d and 5th at Norwich, Eng.

He was the father of Mrs. Alfred Phillips and Mrs. Charles Horseman, of the London Theatres. His age was not given.

IN AN "CLAN," the adjourned summons mentioned in a recent issue, was heard on Aug. 26th, and a decision was to be rendered on the 30th. We shall be able to give full particulars in our next issue.

Musical.

THE HEREFORD MUSICAL FESTIVAL closed on Friday, Aug. 26th. The performance of the "Messiah" drew the largest audience that had assembled during the week, and the temporary cheerfulness imparted to the festival by that performance utterly faded away at the final concert of chamber music. In 1867 the receipts from the festival amounted to £1,144 6s., while in 1870 they dwindled down to £793, 14s., 8½d., but a little more than half the previous amount.

THE BIRMINGHAM MUSICAL FESTIVAL was inaugurated at Birmingham, Eng., in the Town Hall, on Aug. 30th. The artists, both vocal and instrumental, are said to have been efficient. Mlle. Tietjens, Mme. Patey, Messrs. Sims Reeves and Bandley form a quartet worthy of any occasion, and instrumental art had its most gifted exponent in the person of Mme. Arabella Goddard. Miss Wynne, Mr. Vernon Rigby and Signor Foli also assisted in the vocal department. At this festival no less than five new works were announced to be performed, the most important of which was "St. Peter," by Benedict; Barrett's "Paradise and the Peri." Dr. Miller's cantata, "Naia and Damayanti," excites much curiosity, as the
